By The Associated Press

President Ford said today he was disturbed by the maritime unions' announced refusal to load U.S. grain on ships headed for the Soviet Union.

Ford made the statement as farm organization leaders and political figures in key grain states reacted strongly against the unions' action.

At a meeting in Minneapolis, Minn., with broadcast and newspaper executives from six states, the President was asked for his reaction to the unions' announcement.

"I'm disturbed by the action yesterday," Ford replied. He did not elaborate.

AFL-CIO President George Meany said Monday the unions will refuse to handle the grain cargoes until the Ford administration guarantees that consumers are protected from higher prices and takes steps to provide more work for American seamen.

The boycott is being imposed at Great Lakes, Gulf and East Coast ports because the grain sales to the Soviet Union would "cost American consumers billions of dollars," Meany told newsmen in Washington.

The stop-work order came after the International Longshoremen's Association and five other AFL-CIO maritime unions last month threatened to boycott the new Soviet grain shipments.

There was no immediate reaction from Ford administration officials.

However, Gov. Robert F. Bennett of Kansas — the nation's biggest wheat-producing state — called the boycott "arrogant."

"The refusal of longshoremen to load American wheat on vessels bound for the Soviet Union is an ill-conceived grandstand play that could have tragic consequences for the wheat-producing Midwest and our entire nation," Bennett said.

The governor urged President Ford "to take quick and forceful action to see that the export of U. S. grain is not disrupted."

Board members of the Kansas Farm Bureau directed John Junior Armstrong, their president, to investigate the possibility of a $1-billion class action suit against the AFL-CIO and the International Longshoremen's Association.

"It's hard to believe that one man can bring economic havoc on American agriculture, but Meany did it," Armstrong said.

Meany said orders were issued Monday to stop handling grain on two ships in the Port of Houston until it can be determined whether the cargo involves new purchases or shipments under an earlier deal. Old purchases will be loaded, he said.

However, longshoremen in Houston continued to load grain bound for Russia. A spokesman for the AFL-CIO said later there apparently was a lag before the longshoremen received official orders not to load ships.

Citing rising prices for flour, wheat, corn and soybeans over the past month, Meany told a news conference the new grain

Crime up in Sikeston

Major crimes increased by 16 per cent in Sikeston during the first six months of the year, according to figures released this week by the police department.

The rise was below the average national increase of 21 per cent for all rural communities and 19 per cent for communities te size of Sikeston.

The cost of crime to the victims rose also, with $76,676 worth of property stolen in 1975 compared to $63,793 stolen in 1974.

Larcenies accounted for the single biggest jump, with 268 reported in the first six months this year, compared with 203 in the first half of 1974. However, the property loss did not increase as rapidly, rising to $22,370 from $22,170 in 1974.

Burglaries decreased in the first six months of the year to 82 from 90 during the first half of 1974. In 1974 there were 37 home burglaries and 53 business burglaries for a total loss of $23,333. In 1975 there were 29 home burglaries and 53 business burglaries for a total loss of $21,846.

There were five robberies in 1975 with a loss of $2,450, compared to four robberies in 1974 with a lost of $450.

There were 12 auto thefts during the first six months of both 1974 and 1975, but the thieves were more discriminating this year -- the loss to the victims went from $17,885 to $30,010.

One rape was reported in the first six months of this year, while none was reported in the first half of 1974.

There were no homicides in the first half of the year, compared to three in the same period of 1974.

There were five felonious assaults during the first half of the year, compared to two during the first half of 1974.

Figures are not yet available for crimes solved and property recovered during the two recording periods, but they appear to be somewhat ahead of last year, according to Sgt. Richard Couch.

BENTON — Following an inspection of the Scott County Landfill Monday, three inspectors from the Missouri Department of Natural Resources — Rick Roberts, Jim Huck and Joe Schilli of Jefferson City — informed the County Court some discrepancies had been found, including operation of the landfill as an open burning dump.

The inspectors told the court a letter spelling out the full details of what needs to be corrected, as well as some suggetions for improvements, would be sent soon.

Bond again urges floodway funding

JEFFERSON CITY — Gov. Christopher S. Bond again has urged federal officials to provide funding for the St. John's Bayou and New Madrid Floodway Project in Southeast Missouri.

Bond, who last March supported the project in a letter to Lt. Gene. William C. Gribble Jr., chief of the Army Corps of Engineers, renewed his request after an inspection of drainage problems in Southeast Missouri.

Bond gave personal support to the flood protection and drainage project in letter to James Lynn, director of the Office of Management and Budget, and Victor Vesey, assistant secretary of the Army for civil affairs.

"Our review of this project assures that it has a broad base of support, including environmentalists, agricultural interests, conservationists and urban concerns of the area," Bond told the officials. "The prospect for improved drainage and the opportunity to provide flood protection to this area is encouraging."

The project, to be handled by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers at an estimated cost of $3.7 million in federal funds, will benefit some 48,000 acres of Southeast Missouri land.

The plans include construction of a floodgate to prevent overflow and backup of water in flood-prone areas near the Mississippi River. By diverting flood waters, much good agricultural land will be p rotected, Bond said.

Bond elections set

WYATT — Residents of Wyatt and Wilson City will vote in special elections Sept. 2 on proposed revenue bond issues to be used for the construction of sanitary sewer systems.

Wyatt voters will ballot on a $150,000 proposal and Wilson City residents will vote on a $50,000 proposal. If approved, principal and interest on the bonds for the joint project will be paid from revenue derived from the operation of the system.

Cost of the total project is approximately $400,000. Assistance from the Department of Housing and Urban Development, Environmental Protection Agency and Missouri Clean Water Commission will be funded for the project if local bond issues are approved.

On Jan. 22, 1974, residents voted on bond issues in the same amounts. Although approved on the local level, the project was not accepted by the bonding company due to a technicality in wording that combined proposed sewer improvements with water system improvements.

A special meeting, called by the Wyatt Board of Aldermen, will be held at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 25 at the Moxley Farms office.

Persons with questions concerning the bond election, construction of the system or the selling of water to farmers are asked to attend.

THE "SUBVERSIVE" ASTRONAUTS

It didn't make much of a splash in the Washington, D.C. papers, but to us one of the most significant stories to come out of the Apollo- Soyuz space mission came from the office of Sen. William Proxmire of Wisconsin.

Proxmire told reporters of this incident which took place during a training session in Moscow, preceding the joint space flight:

U.S. astronauts and technicians were watching a Soviet hockey game on television during a relaxed moment. One U.S. astronaut started to move his chair closer to the screen to concentrate on the action. As he began to move his chair, a Soviet "secretary" to the cosmonaut corps said, "Don't touch it! Take mine!"

"By this time, however, the chair had moved, snapping a wire leading from the bottom of the chair into the floor," Proxmire related.

Apparently the Americans reacted with an attitude of amusement and let the incident pass in order to avoid controvery.

But, what an incredible situation, that the Communists cannot even trust their own space flyers to meet in the same room with Americans, without being watched and bugged! This one incident provides moot evidence of everything that Solzhenitsyn and other opponents of the Communist system have been trying to tell us for a long time: that the entire Communist state is ruled from top to bottom by the KGB — the Soviet Secret Police — who hold the power of life or death over every inmate in that "prison" nation, no matter how great his achievements or how high he may rise in the Communist Society. Every person has an invisible chain around his neck; and while, to the uninformed observer, the individual may be "free," the fact is that the KGB can pull that clain back in - along with the victim's neck - any time the Dictatorship wishes.

SAFETY FIRST AND FOREMOST

A recent survey of kids (and parents) in cars by the Insurance Insititute for Highway Safety turned up some disturbing figures. The study involved observations of 8,893 children less than 10 years old in 5,050 cars in amusement areas and shipping centers in Maryland, Massachusetts and Virginia.

It was found that 82 per cent of the children were sitting or standing alone unrestrained, 6 per cent were on someone's lap restrained and 5 per cent were in restraint devices designed for children that either were not restrained themselves or the children were not restrained within them. Another 1 per cent were using inadequate protective devices.

Even when parents who were driving had taken the initiative to fasten their seat belts, more than 75 per cent of their children were not restrained.

"Stated differently," says Institute researcher Dr. Allan Williams, "parents transporting their own children on average took better care of themselves with crash restraints than of their own children."

Why this is so is more than a question of safety. (In 1973, 2,740 children under the age of 15 were killed in motor vehicle accidents.) Questions about the legal liability of parents and other drivers for damages might arise in the case of injury to unrestrained children in a crash, says Williams.

SILT OR POLLUTANT? A MATTER OF DEFINITION

If a city takes water from a muddy river, cleans and purifies it for the use of its residential and industrial customers and sends the separated dirt and other solid matter back into the river, it would hardly seem to be guilty of polluting the river.

Yet it would in the eyes of the Environmental Protection Agency. Or so claims the American Water Works Assn. in a hefty, three-inch three document it presented the other day in the House Public Works Subcommittee on Investigation and Review.

The central theme of 17 separate exhibits offered by the AWWA, an organization representing some 30,000 public and private water utilities and others in the water treatment field, was that the present environmental effect of most treatment plant discharges is "inconsequential" and that elimination of the discharges would produce "no noticeable benefit."

However, if the federal Water Pollution Control Act is not changed, it warned, major construction and increased operating costs would result in substantially higher water bills to users.

Much of the difficulty, says the AWWA, is that the Environmental Protection Agency wants to consider silts as pollutants. They are not, the AWWA argues, nor are they caused by water treatment plant operations in the first place.

"Treatment plant removal is only a temporary separation of the sediment from treated water," says one portion of the AWWA report. "It is then returned to the original water course with no discernible change in sediment content of the surface waters."

Calling blanket regulation impractical, the association maintains that effluent discharge guidelines must be flexible and related to the quality of the streams that receive the discharges—stringent where required and lenient where stream conditions allow. And where no measurable effect on stream quality is found, no controls should be necessary.

BRITAIN'S OIL BOOM 'THANK THE AMERICANS'

The one way to really solve the energy problem, and not just spread the shortage around, is to put an end to government policies that hamper domestic energy production. The Nixon Administration knew this. The Ford Administration knows it. But the Democratic leadership in Congress (and our Second District Rep. Martha Keys included) just never seems to learn.

While the debate goes on in Congress on the pros and cons of allowing the oil industry to invest its earnings in new domestic production, it is interesting to note that, spurred largely by American money and know-how, an unprecedented wave of prosperity based on North Sea oil is gushing through the remote, rural region of northeast Scotland.

U.S. News & World Report says, eventually, all Britain will share in the oil riches. Industry experts predict that by early 1980s, the offshore fields will make Britain self-sufficient in oil and one of the world's top seven producers, on a par with Libya and Nigeria.

Even now the multibillion-dollar oil rush is having a startling impact on the area around Inverness, Scotland. Unemployment, a major problem here for centuries, has all but vanished as U.S. companies alone have created more than 5,000 jobs in three years.

As one Scottish worker told USN&WR, "We've got to thank the Americans for a hell of alot. Make no mistake --it has been the American drive and expertise that have got us where we are."

Eighty-one U.S. companies are operating in Britain to help develop the North Sea fields--estimated to contain 42 billion barrels of oil, two thirds of which are in the British sectors.

Among the prizes, in addition to the oil itself, is an annual market of 2.4 billion dollars for goods and equipment needed to bring the oil on stream. At least six large-scale American-backed ventures are giving fresh hope to Inverness. It's the same story at the ports of Peterhead and Aberdeen, where dozens of U.S. firms--including Exxon, Mobil and Santa Fe--are sparking the drive to get North Sea oil to the marketplace.

Highland Fabricators, owned half by the Texas firm of Brown & Root Inc. and half by British Interests, has invested more than 60 million dollars to convert a 150-acre site into one of the world's largest dry docks and plans to put another 29 million in the project. The company constructs production platforms that are designed to withstand 94-foot waves and 100-mile-per-hour gales that sometimes sweep the North Sea.

Nevertheless, introduction of these oil-oriented industries to the rural areas of Scotland has disrupted the old ways. Farmers find it almost impossible to hire laborers. Costs of many services, such as auto repair, have soared as mechanics and other technicians join the oil industry.

But few people want to turn the calendar back to 1972. Most residents realize that the arrival of the Americans saved the region from slow economic death.

So why are we holding back our American oil industry in spending its profits for new development of oil production? We've got the know-how and expertise if Democratic leadership in Congress will get off their back.

POPULATION THEORY: PICKING YOUR STAND

As the World Population Conference amply demonstrated, there are dozens of ways to look at world population problems. Some people are more dogmatic than others; but each of us holds beliefs that are conditioned to a large extent by how we see ourselves in relation to the world around us.

Laymen are often confused by the bewildering array of expert opinions on population issues. Qualified social scientists disagree on such basic issues as the optimum rate of population growth, the carrying capacity of the earth, and the relationship of population growth to resource distribution.

It's no wonder the average newspaper reader is at a loss, if the savants are so divided. Recently, RF Illustrated, a publication of the Rockefeller foundation, succinctly described the major schools of thought on population control. The author, Nick Eberstadt, a contributing editor, did such a good job of capturing the essential points, that we thought it useful to pass them along to you. Eberstadt wrote:

"The Malthusians believe that population will inevitably outstrip food production, no matter how much is invested in family planning programs. They would claim, for instance, that the United States's Food for peace program, which prevented tens of millions of Indians from starving in the 1965 drought, did not actually help them because it permitted them to multiply—and to starve in even greater numbers in the future.

"The Neo-Malthusians believe that population, left unchecked, will outstrip food production and use up resource reserves, but that population programs can check population at acceptable levels. They believe that family size must be limited, through coercive measures if necessary.

"Pronatalists believe that the population problem is not one of numbers; that it is rather one of under-exploitation of the world's resources. British economist Wilfred Beckerman, for example, suggests that by deforesting jungles and replanging deserts the world could comfortably hold a population of 60 billion people.

"The Developmentalists' slogan is 'Take care of the people and the population will take care of itself.' They observe that birth rates only fall significantly when the standard of living rises significantly for the majority of people. Although they encourage family planning, they regard it more as a health service than a means of population control.

"Marxists feel the population problem is a misnomer: the real problem, they say, is that the world's resources are being wastefully and inequitably used, and if maldistribution is corrected the earth could comfortably hold many more people."

For ourselves, we can see some logic in each of these positions, although Beckerman's suggestion about deforesting the jungles stops us cold.

What we would like to see evolve is a new school of thought on population issues, which combines the best of the above: a serious concern about the limits of population growth, based on the constraints of the environment and resource availability; indignation about the maldistribution and senseless waste of the resources we have; and a conviction that family planning can be made to work—hopefully without coercion—if there exists sufficient political will and commitment.

Our concern is for people—those now alive and those still to be born—and for the kind of lives they can expect to lead.

Where do you stand?

ADVERTISING: ANTIDOTE FOR HIGH DRUG PRICES?

The Federal Trade Commission's proposal to permit pharmacists to advertise the retail prices of prescription medicines, even as they now do the over-the-counter variety, has drawn fire from the National Association of Retail Druggists.

The FTC is unwittingly paving the way for misleading prescription drug advertising, charges association president E. Boyd Garrett.

Differences in prescription drug prices more often than not correspond to a genuine difference in the value of what the consumer receives, he says. For example, so-called competitive prescription pricing by the huge corporate chains and discounters is based upon virtually automatic dispensing of drugs by a hard pressed pharmacist who is so busy meeting a prescription quota that he may not even have time to meet the customer.

On the other hand, prescription prices charged by independent pharmacists include professional services such as counselling the customer on the proper use of medication, maintenance of customers' drug profiles, working with physicians to avoid adverse drug interactions, emergency after-hours service and delivery to shut-ins.

"The person who buys a prescription drug product is not just a customer, but actually a patient who requires pharmaceutical health care service," says Garrett.

He makes a counterproposal that the FTC require all prescription price ads to carry a warning to consumers that bargain-price prescriptions without professional services "may be hazardous to their health."

Many Americans no doubt consider their neighborhood pharmacist to be the medical partner of their personal physician. Others may wonder where they can find such a pharmacist. Still others may consider the dispensing of medical advice to be the province of the physician.

But the central question here is that of freedom of choice.

The person who is willing to pay for "professional services" and other conveniences along with the prescription he buys should be permitted to do so, and the druggist who devotes special attention to his customers should of course be free to advertise that fact.

But it would also seem that the person who merely wants a prescription at the lowest possible price, without any frills, should be enabled to do comparison shopping in this field as he does in any other.

In any event, the pharmaceutical industry has been hard pressed to justify the extremely wide discrepancies that have been found between the prices charged by independent and discount druggists for the very same drug—in some cases as much as several hundred per cent. For those dependent upon regular medication, this could amount to a sizeable difference in their budgets. The FTC estimates that competitive prescription drug advertising could save consumers $130 million a year.

According to Garrett, however, just as bad money drives out good, independent pharmacists will be obliged by economic factors to limit their services, or allow the chain stores to drive them out of business.

The laws against advertising prescription drug prices now in force in 33 states were enacted to protect consumers, not to oppress them, he says, warning that "the publicity attendant upon abolishing these laws will lull American consumers into believing that they are protected against being overcharged, when in fact they will be underserviced."

A great many Americans may be willing to take that risk.

Washington Merry-Go-Round
By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Somoza's Inventory

with
Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- In an earlier column, we named Anastasio Somoza, the Big Banana of Nicaragua, as the world's greediest ruler.

Our conclusion was based on documents, written in Spanish and smuggled out of Nicaragua, which we compared with secret U.S. records.

The Somoza family has acquired, incredibly, half the private property in this little nation. Their farm acreage alone is roughly equivalent in size to the entire republic of El Salvador.

Their enormous wealth has been squeezed out of impoverished subjects, whose average pay isa meager 30 cents an hour. Nicaraguans can't turn around without contributing to the Somoza fortune. The dictator rakes off a profit from the food they eat, the clothes they wear, the houses they live in, the banks they borrow from.

No enterprise is too small to escape Somoza's grasp. He has an interest in distilleries, sugar mills, cement factories, meat packing plants, hog and cattle farms, cigarette and cigar production, professional sports, recreation spas, recording companies, gravel agencies, the national airline, hotels, houses of prostitution, salt plants and shoe factories.

The dictator even takes blood from his countrymen at $5 for half a liter and sells it abroad for $35 a liter. He made a personal visit to Haiti in 1971 to see how the bloodsuckers there operate.

In 1955, the family was granted the "rights" to every television channel in the country. For five years thereafter, they held exclusive rights to import television sets. They also own a number of radio stations.

Their properties range from teeming slums to a metal company, which produces galvanized steel, round iron and metal structures. Another Somoza plant makes the cement that is used to pave the streets of Managua.

Each year the dictator raises about $4 million for his political party, the Nationalist Liberal Party, through forced donations from government employees. They don't have to worry about the paperwork; the payments are automatically deducted from their paychecks.

Many are also compelled to cough up donations for banquets in Somoza's honor and, each December, they "contribute" about $100,000 in gifts for his birthday.

The dictator has also planted relatives in choice jobs, where they, too, have grown rich. His brother, Joe, is the Army's powerful Inspector General. An uncle runs the nation's power and light company.

A cousin is president of INFONAC, a national development institute set up to funnel foreign aid and commercial loans into family enterprises. Another cousin is editor of the family newspaper, which all state employees are required to subscribe to.

Somoza's brother-in-law, Guillermo Sevilla-Sacasa, is the Nicaraguan ambassador in Washington where he is widely regarded as the most pompous person in town. He also holds the world record, no doubt, for attending parties.

The dictator's wife, Hope Portocarrero de Somoza, is an American citizen. This hasn't prevented her from holding down two top government positions. It is strictly against U.S. law for American citizens to hold office in foreign governments, but she has managed somehow to get around it.

Like his wife, Somoza's mistress, Dinorah Sampson, is also a power in Nicaragua. She controls the nominations to various public offices and does a thriving business on the side in contraband clothing and jewels.

Footnote: We have made repeated attempts to reach a responsible official at the Nicaraguan embassy for comment and rebuttal. We were told that no one was available to talk to us.

NIXON'S MEMOIRS: Richard Nixon has completed the first 100,000 words of his memoirs. He is writing the final draft himself.

The big question is: what will he say about Watergate?

Sources who have talked to him have found him bitter and defensive on the subject. From remarks he has made, they expect him to accept the responsibility for Watergate but then blame everyone else for what happened.

The visitors report Nixon looking tanned, fit and healthy. The limp from his phlebitis operation is gone. After a year in exile, his friends report, Nixon seems to be accepting his fate and looking hopefully toward the future.

WYMAN'S OFFICE: The General Services Administration has given favored treatment to Louis Wyman, the Republican candidate, in the disputed New Hampshire Senate election.

The photo-finish campaign between Wyman and Democrat John Durkin has been sent back to the state for a re-run.

But while the two candidates were in Washington, fighting it out in the Senate chamber, Wyman was operating two federal offices back home -- one in Portsmouth and one in Manchester. Durkin was given no equivalent space.

The GSA generously provided Wyman with $12,365.84 worth of office space and another $3,857 worth of furnishings. A GSA spokesman told us the space was vacated August 7. It was merely a coincidence, he said, that this happened to be the day after our first inquiry.

LOVLOST FINDS ITS WAY

(Nothing seems to have changed in the last 20 yers as proved by this column which Mr. Buchwald wrote when he was living in Europe.)

Many people are still not too clear about what exactly is happening with the gold reserves in the United States. It appears from what the President has said, and what the secretary of the treasury has tried to do, that the situation is serious.

Nothing could dramatize the plight better than what has happened in Lovlost-by-the-Sea, the tiny European country that has been a bulwark against communism and a friend of the United States since the early days of 1946.

As everyone knows, Lovlost was on the side of the Germans in World War II and was therefore entitled to immediate financial aid from the United States once the hostilities had ceased.

Since 1946 Americans have poured in $150 million until today she has one of the strongest economies in Western Europe. Just before the Marshall Plan went into effect, Lovlost's currency, which is known as the "bardot," was one of the weakest in the world and it took 500 bardots to make a dollar. Now it takes 500 dollars to equal one bardot.

It is this strengthening of the bardot that has caused a drain on the U.S. gold reserves.

To make matters worse, Lovlost is a vital link in the chain of Western European defenses, and it has the only carrier pigeon station in NATO.

While the bodies of the pigeons can be handled by Lovlost, only the beaks may be touched by the Americans. It is for this reason that American troops, a private and a corporal, have been stationed in Lovlost.

When President Eisenhower put out his edict that Army dependents had to come home, it raised a bitter fuss in Lovlost. The corporal, who had a wife with him, said nothing as he was carrying on with a girl from Lovlost. But the private, who was unmarried, was furious because he was in love with the corporal's wife.

The private protested to the secretary of defense, pointing out that if the corporal's wife was sent home morale among the U.S. forces in Lovlost would go to hell. But while the secretary was sympathetic, he said that no matter how noble the cause "no exceptions could be made."

The first step in America's dramatic effort to halt the flow of gold to Lovlost was made.

The next step was even more dramatic. The Army PX in Lovlost, one of the largest in Europe with 500 civilian employees, was forbidden to sell Scotch, Canadian whisky or French Champagne. Since the corporal drank beer and the private made his own from raisins, not too much of a saving was made there. But as Pentagon officials explained, if the corporal was promoted to sergeant he "might" start drinking Scotch, and it was better to lock the barn door before the horse was stolen.

The third step was by far the most dramatic. The President decided to send the assistant secretary of state for Lovlost affairs to plead with the Lovlost prime minister to pay for the costs of maintaining American troops in Lovlost.

In one of the worst slaps to American prestige, the prime minister turned down the assistant secretary flat and said, "Thanks to American aid, the bardot is now the strongest currency in the world. If we helped share the military burden, the bardot would be weakened again and then we would have to ask for an increase in American dollar aid, something we don't want to do, as you yourself say the dollar is in trouble."

The only thing that came out of the assistant secretary's visit is that everyone in Lovlost started to panic and exchange dollars or Spanish pesetas.

But as the assistant secretary pointed out when he got home, "Lovlost is now aware of our situation, and for that reason alone my trip was worthwhile."

THE "SUBVERSIVE" ASTRONAUTS

It didn't make much of a splash in the Washington, D.C. papers, but to us one of the most significant stories to come out of the Apollo- Soyuz space mission came from the office of Sen. William Proxmire of Wisconsin.

Proxmire told reporters of this incident which took place during a training session in Moscow, preceding the joint space flight:

U.S. astronauts and technicians were watching a Soviet hockey game on television during a relaxed moment. One U.S. astronaut started to move his chair closer to the screen to concentrate on the action. As he began to move his chair, a Soviet "secretary" to the cosmonaut corps said, "Don't touch it! Take mine!"

"By this time, however, the chair had moved, snapping a wire leading from the bottom of the chair into the floor," Proxmire related.

Apparently the Americans reacted with an attitude of amusement and let the incident pass in order to avoid controvery.

But, what an incredible situation, that the Communists cannot even trust their own space flyers to meet in the same room with Americans, without being watched and bugged! Eighty-one U.S. companies are operating in Britain to help develop the North Sea fields--estimated to contain 42 billion barrels of oil, two thirds of which are in the British sectors.

Among the prizes, in addition to the oil itself, is an annual market of 2.4 billion dollars for goods and equipment needed to bring the oil on stream. At least six large-scale American-backed ventures are giving fresh hope to Inverness. It's the same story at the ports of Peterhead and Aberdeen, where dozens of U.S. firms--including Exxon, Mobil and Santa Fe--are sparking the drive to get North Sea oil to the marketplace.

Highland Fabricators, owned half by the Texas firm of Brown & Root Inc. and half by British Interests, has invested more than 60 million dollars to convert a 150-acre site into one of the world's largest dry docks and plans to put another 29 million in the project. The company constructs production platforms that are designed to withstand 94-foot waves and 100-mile-per-hour gales that sometimes sweep the North Sea.

Nevertheless, introduction of these oil-oriented industries to the rural areas of Scotland has disrupted the old ways. Farmers find it almost impossible to hire laborers. Costs of many services, such as auto repair, have soared as mechanics and other technicians join the oil industry.

But few people want to turn the calendar back to 1972. Most residents realize that the arrival of the Americans saved the region from slow economic death.

So why are we holding back our American oil industry in spending its profits for new development of oil production? We've got the know-how and expertise if Democratic leadership in Congress will get off their back.

POPULATION THEORY: PICKING YOUR STAND

As the World Population Conference amply demonstrated, there are dozens of ways to look at world population problems. Some people are more dogmatic than others; but each of us holds beliefs that are conditioned to a large extent by how we see ourselves in relation to the world around us.

Laymen are often confused by the bewildering array of expert opinions on population issues. Qualified social scientists disagree on such basic issues as the optimum rate of population growth, the carrying capacity of the earth, and the relationship of population growth to resource distribution.

It's no wonder the average newspaper reader is at a loss, if the savants are so divided. Recently, RF Illustrated, a publication of the Rockefeller foundation, succinctly described the major schools of thought on population control. The author, Nick Eberstadt, a contributing editor, did such a good job of capturing the essential points, that we thought it useful to pass them along to you. Eberstadt wrote:

"The Malthusians believe that population will inevitably outstrip food production, no matter how much is invested in family planning programs. They would claim, for instance, that the United States's Food for peace program, which prevented tens of millions of Indians from starving in the 1965 drought, did not actually help them because it permitted them to multiply—and to starve in even greater numbers in the future.

"The Neo-Malthusians believe that population, left unchecked, will outstrip food production and use up resource reserves, but that population programs can check population at acceptable levels. They believe that family size must be limited, through coercive measures if necessary.

"Pronatalists believe that the population problem is not one of numbers; that it is rather one of under-exploitation of the world's resources. British economist Wilfred Beckerman, for example, suggests that by deforesting jungles and replanging deserts the world could comfortably hold a population of 60 billion people.

"The Developmentalists' slogan is 'Take care of the people and the population will take care of itself.' They observe that birth rates only fall significantly when the standard of living rises significantly for the majority of people. Although they encourage family planning, they regard it more as a health service than a means of population control.

"Marxists feel the population problem is a misnomer: the real problem, they say, is that the world's resources are being wastefully and inequitably used, and if maldistribution is corrected the earth could comfortably hold many more people."

For ourselves, we can see some logic in each of these positions, although Beckerman's suggestion about deforesting the jungles stops us cold.

What we would like to see evolve is a new school of thought on population issues, which combines the best of the above: a serious concern about the limits of population growth, based on the constraints of the environment and resource availability; indignation about the maldistribution and senseless waste of the resources we have; and a conviction that family planning can be made to work—hopefully without coercion—if there exists sufficient political will and commitment.

Our concern is for people—those now alive and those still to be born—and for the kind of lives they can expect to lead.

Where do you stand?

ADVERTISING: ANTIDOTE FOR HIGH DRUG PRICES?

The Federal Trade Commission's proposal to permit pharmacists to advertise the retail prices of prescription medicines, even as they now do the over-the-counter variety, has drawn fire from the National Association of Retail Druggists.

The FTC is unwittingly paving the way for misleading prescription drug advertising, charges association president E. Boyd Garrett.

Differences in prescription drug prices more often than not correspond to a genuine difference in the value of what the consumer receives, he says. For example, so-called competitive prescription pricing by the huge corporate chains and discounters is based upon virtually automatic dispensing of drugs by a hard pressed pharmacist who is so busy meeting a prescription quota that he may not even have time to meet the customer.

On the other hand, prescription prices charged by independent pharmacists include professional services such as counselling the customer on the proper use of medication, maintenance of customers' drug profiles, working with physicians to avoid adverse drug interactions, emergency after-hours service and delivery to shut-ins.

"The person who buys a prescription drug product is not just a customer, but actually a patient who requires pharmaceutical health care service," says Garrett.

He makes a counterproposal that the FTC require all prescription price ads to carry a warning to consumers that bargain-price prescriptions without professional services "may be hazardous to their health."

Many Americans no doubt consider their neighborhood pharmacist to be the medical partner of their personal physician. Others may wonder where they can find such a pharmacist. Still others may consider the dispensing of medical advice to be the province of the physician.

But the central question here is that of freedom of choice.

The person who is willing to pay for "professional services" and other conveniences along with the prescription he buys should be permitted to do so, and the druggist who devotes special attention to his customers should of course be free to advertise that fact.

But it would also seem that the person who merely wants a prescription at the lowest possible price, without any frills, should be enabled to do comparison shopping in this field as he does in any other.

In any event, the pharmaceutical industry has been hard pressed to justify the extremely wide discrepancies that have been found between the prices charged by independent and discount druggists for the very same drug—in some cases as much as several hundred per cent. For those dependent upon regular medication, this could amount to a sizeable difference in their budgets. The FTC estimates that competitive prescription drug advertising could save consumers $130 million a year.

According to Garrett, however, just as bad money drives out good, independent pharmacists will be obliged by economic factors to limit their services, or allow the chain stores to drive them out of business.

The laws against advertising prescription drug prices now in force in 33 states were enacted to protect consumers, not to oppress them, he says, warning that "the publicity attendant upon abolishing these laws will lull American consumers into believing that they are protected against being overcharged, when in fact they will be underserviced."

A great many Americans may be willing to take that risk.

Washington Merry-Go-Round
By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Somoza's Inventory

with
Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- In an earlier column, we named Anastasio Somoza, the Big Banana of Nicaragua, as the world's greediest ruler.

Our conclusion was based on documents, written in Spanish and smuggled out of Nicaragua, which we compared with secret U.S. records.

The Somoza family has acquired, incredibly, half the private property in this little nation. Their farm acreage alone is roughly equivalent in size to the entire republic of El Salvador.

Their enormous wealth has been squeezed out of impoverished subjects, whose average pay isa meager 30 cents an hour. Nicaraguans can't turn around without contributing to the Somoza fortune. The dictator rakes off a profit from the food they eat, the clothes they wear, the houses they live in, the banks they borrow from.

No enterprise is too small to escape Somoza's grasp. He has an interest in distilleries, sugar mills, cement factories, meat packing plants, hog and cattle farms, cigarette and cigar production, professional sports, recreation spas, recording companies, gravel agencies, the national airline, hotels, houses of prostitution, salt plants and shoe factories.

The dictator even takes blood from his countrymen at $5 for half a liter and sells it abroad for $35 a liter. He made a personal visit to Haiti in 1971 to see how the bloodsuckers there operate.

In 1955, the family was granted the "rights" to every television channel in the country. For five years thereafter, they held exclusive rights to import television sets. They also own a number of radio stations.

Their properties range from teeming slums to a metal company, which produces galvanized steel, round iron and metal structures. Another Somoza plant makes the cement that is used to pave the streets of Managua.

Each year the dictator raises about $4 million for his political party, the Nationalist Liberal Party, through forced donations from government employees. They don't have to worry about the paperwork; the payments are automatically deducted from their paychecks.

Many are also compelled to cough up donations for banquets in Somoza's honor and, each December, they "contribute" about $100,000 in gifts for his birthday.

The dictator has also planted relatives in choice jobs, where they, too, have grown rich. His brother, Joe, is the Army's powerful Inspector General. An uncle runs the nation's power and light company.

A cousin is president of INFONAC, a national development institute set up to funnel foreign aid and commercial loans into family enterprises. Another cousin is editor of the family newspaper, which all state employees are required to subscribe to.

Somoza's brother-in-law, Guillermo Sevilla-Sacasa, is the Nicaraguan ambassador in Washington where he is widely regarded as the most pompous person in town. He also holds the world record, no doubt, for attending parties.

The dictator's wife, Hope Portocarrero de Somoza, is an American citizen. This hasn't prevented her from holding down two top government positions. It is strictly against U.S. law for American citizens to hold office in foreign governments, but she has managed somehow to get around it.

Like his wife, Somoza's mistress, Dinorah Sampson, is also a power in Nicaragua. She controls the nominations to various public offices and does a thriving business on the side in contraband clothing and jewels.

Footnote: We have made repeated attempts to reach a responsible official at the Nicaraguan embassy for comment and rebuttal. We were told that no one was available to talk to us.

NIXON'S MEMOIRS: Richard Nixon has completed the first 100,000 words of his memoirs. He is writing the final draft himself.

The big question is: what will he say about Watergate?

Sources who have talked to him have found him bitter and defensive on the subject. From remarks he has made, they expect him to accept the responsibility for Watergate but then blame everyone else for what happened.

The visitors report Nixon looking tanned, fit and healthy. The limp from his phlebitis operation is gone. After a year in exile, his friends report, Nixon seems to be accepting his fate and looking hopefully toward the future.

WYMAN'S OFFICE: The General Services Administration has given favored treatment to Louis Wyman, the Republican candidate, in the disputed New Hampshire Senate election.

The photo-finish campaign between Wyman and Democrat John Durkin has been sent back to the state for a re-run.

But while the two candidates were in Washington, fighting it out in the Senate chamber, Wyman was operating two federal offices back home -- one in Portsmouth and one in Manchester. Durkin was given no equivalent space.

The GSA generously provided Wyman with $12,365.84 worth of office space and another $3,857 worth of furnishings. A GSA spokesman told us the space was vacated August 7. It was merely a coincidence, he said, that this happened to be the day after our first inquiry.

LOVLOST FINDS ITS WAY

(Nothing seems to have changed in the last 20 yers as proved by this column which Mr. Buchwald wrote when he was living in Europe.)

Many people are still not too clear about what exactly is happening with the gold reserves in the United States. It appears from what the President has said, and what the secretary of the treasury has tried to do, that the situation is serious.

Nothing could dramatize the plight better than what has happened in Lovlost-by-the-Sea, the tiny European country that has been a bulwark against communism and a friend of the United States since the early days of 1946.

As everyone knows, Lovlost was on the side of the Germans in World War II and was therefore entitled to immediate financial aid from the United States once the hostilities had ceased.

Since 1946 Americans have poured in $150 million until today she has one of the strongest economies in Western Europe. Just before the Marshall Plan went into effect, Lovlost's currency, which is known as the "bardot," was one of the weakest in the world and it took 500 bardots to make a dollar. Now it takes 500 dollars to equal one bardot.

It is this strengthening of the bardot that has caused a drain on the U.S. gold reserves.

To make matters worse, Lovlost is a vital link in the chain of Western European defenses, and it has the only carrier pigeon station in NATO.

While the bodies of the pigeons can be handled by Lovlost, only the beaks may be touched by the Americans. It is for this reason that American troops, a private and a corporal, have been stationed in Lovlost.

When President Eisenhower put out his edict that Army dependents had to come home, it raised a bitter fuss in Lovlost. The corporal, who had a wife with him, said nothing as he was carrying on with a girl from Lovlost. But the private, who was unmarried, was furious because he was in love with the corporal's wife.

The private protested to the secretary of defense, pointing out that if the corporal's wife was sent home morale among the U.S. forces in Lovlost would go to hell. But while the secretary was sympathetic, he said that no matter how noble the cause "no exceptions could be made."

The first step in America's dramatic effort to halt the flow of gold to Lovlost was made.

The next step was even more dramatic. The Army PX in Lovlost, one of the largest in Europe with 500 civilian employees, was forbidden to sell Scotch, Canadian whisky or French Champagne. Since the corporal drank beer and the private made his own from raisins, not too much of a saving was made there. But as Pentagon officials explained, if the corporal was promoted to sergeant he "might" start drinking Scotch, and it was better to lock the barn door before the horse was stolen.

The third step was by far the most dramatic. The President decided to send the assistant secretary of state for Lovlost affairs to plead with the Lovlost prime minister to pay for the costs of maintaining American troops in Lovlost.

In one of the worst slaps to American prestige, the prime minister turned down the assistant secretary flat and said, "Thanks to American aid, the bardot is now the strongest currency in the world. If we helped share the military burden, the bardot would be weakened again and then we would have to ask for an increase in American dollar aid, something we don't want to do, as you yourself say the dollar is in trouble."

The only thing that came out of the assistant secretary's visit is that everyone in Lovlost started to panic and exchange dollars or Spanish pesetas.

But as the assistant secretary pointed out when he got home, "Lovlost is now aware of our situation, and for that reason alone my trip was worthwhile."

Though an erupting volcano brings to mind pictures of flowing rivers of boiling lava, not all active volcanoes emit lava. Mount Taal in the Philippines, with a history of death and destruction, has spewed forth noxious gases, steaming mud and ash and white-hot rocks — but never lava.

Policy for school meals and milk announced

The policy for free and reduced prices in area school districts for children unable to pay the full price of meals and extra milk served under the national school lunch, school breakfast and special milk programs has been announced.

All school districts in the Bootheel area will follow this policy, including the Sikeston, Scott County Central, Kelly, Oran, Illmo-Scott City, Chaffee and Kelso- New Hamburg schools in Scott County; New Madrid County R-1 Enlarged, School District, Risco, Gideon and St. Eustachius Catholic School at Portageville in New Madrid County; Charleston R-1 and East Prairie R-2 districts in Mississippi County; Richland, Bell City, Puxico, Bloomfield, Dexter, Advance and Bernie districts in Stoddard County; Hayti and North Pemiscot schools in Pemiscot County; and Malden and Clarkton schools in Dunklin County.

Area education officials have adopted the following family size-income criteria for determining eligibility:

| Family Size | Maximum Family Income Eligible for free meals and Free Milk | Maximum Family Income Eligible for reduced price meals |
|---|---|---|
| 1 | $ 3,230 | $ 4,520 |
| 2 | 4,240 | 5,930 |
| 3 | 5,250 | 7,350 |
| 4 | 6,260 | 8,770 |
| 5 | 7,190 | 10,060 |
| 6 | 8,110 | 11,360 |
| 7 | 8,950 | 12,530 |
| 8 | 9,790 | 13,700 |
| 9 | 10,550 | 14,770 |
| 10 | 11,310 | 15,840 |
| | 750 | 1,050 |

Children from families whose income is at or below those shown are eligible for free meals and free extra milk, or reduced price meals. In addition, families not meeting this criteria but with other unusual expenses due to unusually high medical expenses, shelter costs in excess of 30 per cent of income, special education expenses due to the mental or physical condition of a child, and disaster or casualty losses are urged to apply.

They may do so by filling in the application forms sent home in a letter to parents. Additional copies are available at the principal's office in each school. The information provided on the application will be confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted any time during the school year.

In certain cases foster children are also eligible for these benefits. If a family has foster children living with them and wishes to apply for such meals and milk for them, they should contact the school.

In the operation of child-feeding programs, no child will be discriminated against because of race, sex, color, or national origin.

Under the provision of the policy, the unit administrators or superintendents will review applications and determine eligibility. If a parent is dissatisfied with the ruling of the official, he may make a request either orally or in writing to the school district concerned for a hearing to appeal the decision. Hearing procedures are outlined in the policy. A complete copy of the policy is on file in each school, where it may be reviewed by any interested party.

Dress it yourself

Flavored, dressed-up rice dishes are a great boon to a varied menu, but do it yourself and save a bit instead of resorting to ready-made mixes. Just adding a boullion cube instead of salt makes a major difference, and adding mushrooms, onions, chopped peppers, etc. will work wonders for you.

Practical help for oldsters

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — A team of researchers went back to talk to some people who already were over 65 when they were interviewed in small Missouri towns eight years ago.

They found few left who are quite like them.

"They continue to maintain their independence, to rely on themselves as much as possible, to look on welfare as something to be avoided at all costs, to even reject aid offered by their children and to rely on those of their own age for friendships and associations."

These are the conclusions of Dr. C. T. Pihblad, professor emeritus of sociology; Dr. Richard Hessler, a member of the sociology faculty, and Harold Freshley, a research associate at the University of Missouri at Columbia.

They found a determination by these old people to live in their own homes, a loathing f institutional care and a hunger for contacts with friends.

Among their specific suggestions are systematic visits, bus trips and other outings, centers for art and crafts, visiting and discussions.

About 1,700 persons over 65 were interviewed in 1966 in Missouri towns with populations under 5,000.

Interviewers for the Pihblad Hessler-Freshley team found 568 survivors and were able to talk to 69 per cent.

Now they averaged 80 years old; the oldest was 99. Almost all referred to themselves as middle-aged.

About half of those 90 and older lived alone. Only 6 per cent of all those studied were in nursing or boarding homes. Ten per cent lived with children. More than half had a child within 10 miles.

The tabulations showed 81 per cent owned their homes. The houses averaged about half as old as their owners, and some were seedy.

Over two-thirds reported Social Security or other federal assistance was their only major source of income, and in eight years there had been some of erosion of their disdain of "relief."

Median incomes had risen to $2,216 for individuals, $3,235 for a couple. The figures eight years earlier were $1,302 and $2,179.

Here are some other suggestions the researchers made:

— More medical help at home for those able to live at home.

— Expand Medicaid (which fewer than one-third used) to include examinations which would prevent or relieve chronic illnesses.

— Eliminate stairs and steps.

— Create a repair corps, ease credit for home improvements.

— A telephone network to keep tabs on the ill and handicapped.

— Transportation to churches.

— Library service.

— A special column about and for older people in the local newspaper.

"Friendship and contact with friends may be more important to the well-being of the aged than is indicated by a simple count of contacts," the researchers said.

They found most of those they talked to were very satisfied or fairly satisfied with life as it is — depending on their age, health and financial situation.

Why are these people the way they are, so determined to be independent even of children and family?

They were reared in a relatively classless society in rural Missouri with deep beliefs in progress, rugged individualism, marital fidelity and that riches come from honesty, hard work, frugality and prudence. The ideal housewife must be a good cook, a meticulous housekeeper, devoted to her children and not put on airs.

Interviewers for the Pihblad Hessler-Freshley team found 568 survivors and were able to talk to 69 per cent.

Now they averaged 80 years old; the oldest was 99. Almost all referred to themselves as middle-aged.

About half of those 90 and older lived alone. Only 6 per cent of all those studied were in nursing or boarding homes. Ten per cent lived with children. More than half had a child within 10 miles.

The tabulations showed 81 per cent owned their homes. The houses averaged about half as old as their owners, and some were seedy.

Over two-thirds reported Social Security or other federal assistance was their only major source of income, and in eight years there had been some of erosion of their disdain of "relief."

Median incomes had risen to $2,216 for individuals, $3,235 for a couple. The figures eight years earlier were $1,302 and $2,179.

Here are some other suggestions the researchers made:

— More medical help at home for those able to live at home.

— Expand Medicaid (which fewer than one-third used) to include examinations which would prevent or relieve chronic illnesses.

— Eliminate stairs and steps.

— Create a repair corps, ease credit for home improvements.

— A telephone network to keep tabs on the ill and handicapped.

— Transportation to churches.

— Library service.

— A special column about and for older people in the local newspaper.

"Friendship and contact with friends may be more important to the well-being of the aged than is indicated by a simple count of contacts," the researchers said.

They found most of those they talked to were very satisfied or fairly satisfied with life as it is — depending on their age, health and financial situation.

Why are these people the way they are, so determined to be independent even of children and family?

They were reared in a relatively classless society in rural Missouri with deep beliefs in progress, rugged individualism, marital fidelity and that riches come from honesty, hard work, frugality and prudence. The ideal housewife must be a good cook, a meticulous housekeeper, devoted to her children and not put on airs.

Mother-in-law's gasping shakes Erma

My mother-in-law and I have a great relationship. She calls me Edna and I call her on her birthday, Mother's Day and Christmas.

At the wedding when she insisted they put a funeral flag on the fender of her car and drove with her lights on, I sensed somehow I was not what she would have chosen for her son.

But God love her, she has a sense of humor and somehow we've all survived. She has accepted me for what I am. A mistake. And I have learned to live with her through the miracle of sedation.

One of her idiosyncrasies, however, I will never adjust to. I call it her Last Breath Performance.

Check this. I am driving the car and she is sitting beside me. Out of the clear blue sky, I hear her suck in her breath, moan slightly and slump, steadying her head with her hand. I wait, but she doesn't exhale.

The first time this happened, I figured (a) she was leaving the car on a permanent basis; (b) I had closed the electric windows on a gas station attendant and was towing him by his fingers; or (c) we were being followed by a tornado funnel.

Instinctively, I jammed on the brakes of the car, nearly hurling her through the windshield, turned around, grabbed her shoulders, and shouted hysterically, "What's the matter?"

"Darnit," she said. "I just remembered I forgot to lock my back door."

During subsequent drives, I was to learn that she gasped and groaned at girls in shorts, roses in full bloom, a half-stick of gum discovered in her raincoat, and the realization that tomorrow was her sister-in-law's birthday.

She didn't limit her Last Breath Performance to the car. When she watched television or read the newspaper, she would inhale noisily, freeze, put her hand over her mouth and say, "Where will a pleasant boy like Dick Cavett find work?"

I pride myself in being able to live in peace with my mother-in-law, and she puts up with me. The other day we were driving together when she sucked in her breath, clutched her purse and mumbled, "Oh, my."

Figuring she had just remembered a dental appointment, I kept moving and promptly smacked into a truck pulling out from the alley.

She shook her head and made a clicking noise with her tongue. "I tried to warn you, Edna, but you wouldn't listen."

"Face it, Mother," I said. "I'm unstable."

ORANGE CUPS

Inspired by a dessert served at La Petite Ferme, one of New York's distinguished French restaurants.

Medium-size thick-skin, seedless (navel) oranges
Orange-flavor liqueur
Vanilla ice cream, slightly softened

Wash and dry oranges; cut a generous slice from the top of each so the opening will be wide. With a serrated grapefruit knife, cut out the flesh in as large as possible a cone shape. Swish ½ tablespoon liqueur over the inside of each orange cup. Dice the cones and put them into a bowl with their juice; add liqueur — ½ tablespoon for each orange used; spoon into orange cups. Chill until serving time, then top with a little ice cream. We like to serve these with grapefruit spoons.

Ann Landers

Woman hates breast-squeezing doc

Dear Ann Landers: Recently I had plastic surgery on my face. Before going to the hospital for the operation I was told to drop by the doctor's office. He wanted to take pictures of my face for the "before and after" file and give me instructions for entering the hospital.

When I arrived at the office a nurse instructed me to go into a private room and remove my blouse and bra so the doctor could listen to my heart. He came in and he listened to my heart from the back. Then he walked around and felt my breasts "for lumps."

I wonder if this was necessary seeing as how I had come to him for a face operation. What do you think? -- Slightly Suspicious

Dear S.S.: I think it would be wonderful if every doctor took the time and trouble to examine every female patient's breasts for lumps no matter what they came in for.

Also, if they'd take every patient's blood-pressure thousands of strokes and heart attacks could be prevented. I'm all for making these examinations routine. They take only a few minutes and are painless. Moreover, knowing you are okay is a very good feeling.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you insinuated that the reason Elizabeth Taylor lost so many husbands was becaue she didn't fix them breakfast in the morning.

Your theory that wives who knock themselves out have successful marriages is ridiculous. The laziest women I know are the most pampered and adored. The workhorses are kicked in the rump. I know because I'm -- One Of The Latter

Dear One: Talk about a lash-up in commiunications, your letter wins the fur-lined bathtub.

I said nothing about breakfast or workhorses. What I DID says was, "With beauty does not come alifetime guarantee that the marriage will succeed. Liz Taylor, one of the world's most beautiful, is considering her sixth."

Dear Ann Landers: My daughter, age 24, has been treated for gonorrhea and pronounced cured. Following that, she had two abortions 11 months apart. One man was the cause of it all. He did not marry her. All expenses were borne by me – her mother.

After these nightmarish episodes the girl has pulled herself together and appears to be in excellent health, both emotionally and physically.

She is now going with a wonderful young man and they plan to be married. I need to know, what are her chances for becoming pregnant and producing a healthy, normal child?

I have worried myself sick over this although she doesn't seem the least bit concerned. Please reply soon. – Holding Together

Dear Holding: If the abortions were well done, with no complications, and her gynecologist has pronounced her "cured," your daughter's chances of producing a normal, healthy child are excellent.

Even if drinking is the "in" thing in your crowd, it needn't crowd you out. Learn the facts from Ann Landers's booklet, "Booze and You -- For Teen-Agers Only." Send 50 cent in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Household hints

---

Here are a few tips: Keep sandwiches moist after preparation. Cover with a moistened paper towel, then plastic wrap and refrigerate, if necessary, until ready to use.

---

The safest place to keep your lunch is in the office refrigerator. If no refrigerator is available, pack a freezer gel container in with your lunch, as you would with a picnic. Avoid foods such as baked chicken, baked ham, roast beef, fish, potato salad, egg salad, Waldorf salad and all salad fillings made with mayonnaise, as well as mayonnaise itself.

Getting married?

The Daily Standard, 205 S. New Madrid St., now has new wedding forms available at the front office or at the women's desk. Business hours are from 7 a.m., to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Forms will be mailed if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is provided.

The deadline for weddings is three weeks after date of wedding. Pictures will be returned if a self-addressed, stamped envelope large enough to hold a picture is supplied. Color pictures are discouraged. There is no charge for running a wedding. We are happy to publish it.

Missouri Bootheel Kicks

Photos and Text By Jackie Schoeneman

Bootheel humidity temporarily dampened the spirits of Maria "Mimi" Tucker of Philadelphia, Penn. while on an agricultural stopover in Columbus-Belmont Battlefield Park near Clinton, Ky.

Karen Polsgrove of Campbell, senior scout adviser, tries out a tractor tire for size at George Simmons Equipment Co. in Charleston.

Why is a green pepper red? How much does a tractor cost? ..... and How much milk can a cow give? All questions 34 Senior Girl Scouts from across the country asked recently while on an agricultural tour of the Bootheel.

They viewed flood control levees, feedlots, a dairy farm, a crop dusting operation, cotton gins and wore their "Hogs are beautiful" pins as part of "The Missouri Bootheel Kicks," a wider opportunity event sponsored by the Cotton Boll Girl Scout Council, headquartered in Sikeston. The remainder of the 104 scouts studied Ozark folklife and Bootheel heritage.

Perhaps the biggest opportunity was sampling Bootheel hospitality. Once when bathrooms failed to function at a local church where the girls were to stay, townspeople drove the young women to their homes to take showers.

Homemade ice cream and cookies, watermelon, sodas, peanut butter and jelly sandwiches, sodas and chicken and more chicken were some of the goodies generous citizens made available at every stop.

"Talk about Southern hospitality ..... I can't believe it!"

It brings out the best in everyone

If you want to bite into a juicy cantaloupe, you've first got to remove the seeds. Claudia Buchanan of Cleveland, Ohio, patiently does so. Milton Mueller, right, and his brother, Gerald grow a variety of vegetables on their 160-acre farm on Bertrand Route One.

Reds cool Cardinals

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Lefthander Don Gullett's back in the rotation of the Cincinnati Reds, so what else is new?

Gullett looked for all the world Monday night like he'd never missed nine weeks of the season with a broken left thumb, but Manager Sparky Anderson continued his game of musical chairs among Reds pitchers anyway.

"I think I felt stronger as the game went on," said Gullett, who pitched five shutout innings and was credited with a 3-2 win that Reds relievers later barely preserved over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Anderson, who is known as baseball's Captain Hook, followed the impressive Gullett performance with a procession of four relievers beginning with Pedro Borbon in the sixth.

Borbon yielded a single and hit a batter after the Reds had built their lead to 3-0 in the top of the eighth.

Will McEnaney was greeted by Ron Fairly's run-scoring double when he spelled Borbon, then Clay Carroll and finally Rawly Eastwick subdued the Cards after they scored another run in the ninth.

"This keeps us all in shape," quipped the good-natured Carroll, the 32-year-old dean of the Cincinnati relief corps, following his abbreviated stint.

"There was an article in the paper that said our relievers are not overworked, and it's true," Carroll added. "We don't have any pressure on us. We're just playing loose."

Cincinnati's victory, its ninth in a row and 14th in 15 games, came on run-producing hits by Gullett in the second, Tony Perez in the fifth and Pete Rose in the eighth.

But before the Reds were able to blunt the Cardinal bid, the 24-year-old Eastwick endured peril in the ninth.

St. Louis runners were at every base with one out when Eastwick inherited a 2-0 count on Mike Tyson as the successor to Carroll.

Eastwick completed the walk to force in a run, then set down Fairly on a pop fly in front of the plate and induced Brock to fly out ending the game.

The Reds' victory, also their fifth in a row over the Cards, dropped St. Louis 2½ games behind the Philadelphia Phillies and idle Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League East.

Gullett strong

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Don Gullett knew he could go the distance. But he also knew Captain Hook had no such thoughts.

Captain Hook is Sparky Anderson, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, who has a habit of taking out starting pitchers as often as some people take out the garbage.

Not that the Reds' starters are anything resembling that, mind you. It's just that Anderson has been known to take out a starter with a 10-run lead in the ninth inning.

So Gullett was starting his first game in nine weeks Monday night. He had been kayoed out of the Reds' rotation by a hairline fracture of his left thumb, the result of a line drive off the bat of Atlanta's Larvell Blanks on June 16.

And Gullett knew he couldn't expect to stick around too long. In fact, he knew 24 hours in advance that he wouldn't go the distance. But he stuck around just long enough—five shutout innings—to raise his record to 10-3 in the Reds' 3-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

"We had planned to pitch him only five to seven innings," Anderson said. "I said yesterday he was 100 per cent. I also said I'd be more than surprised if the Cardinals were able to score a run off him."

Towns heads SWB

BOLIVAR — Howard Garrett, new head basketball coach at Southwest Baptist College today released a tentative basketball roster for the 1975-76 season. Garrett says that the 15 man roster represents considerable experience by virtue of those Bearcat players who will be returning and at least three transfers from Lake Land College in Mattoon, Ill., where he coached last year.

From the 1974-75 Bearcats, returning starters include 6-5 Fred Towns who received honorable mention all-American plaudits. Fred, from Sikeston, led the district in rebounding while he set new school records in that department. Another starter who will be back for more hardwood action is 6-6 George Ridens of Norwood, Mo. George started at center for most of the season, and was one of the few freshmen in District 16 who made the big step to varsity action in his first year.

Donniel Harrell of Kansas City and Brent Yates of Preston, Mo., are two guards who held starting assignments throughout most of the season and who will be back for another year. Both boys will be seniors this year at Southwest.

From his 33-5 squad at Lake Land last year, Garrett expects help from 6-3 guard Tom Taylor, 6-3 center Joe Schumacher and 6-4 forward Larry Jarrett.

The only player signed by the Bearcats prior to Garrett's arrival was 6-10 Peadro Spicer of Caruthersville. If he develops up to his promise, he could be the big man the 'Cats have been lacking for sevaral years.

The basketball season may be three months away from some, but in Bolivar and on the campus of Southwest Baptist College, the fans are already anticipating the 1975-76 Bearcat season.

Reds cool Cardinals

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Lefthander Don Gullett's back in the rotation of the Cincinnati Reds, so what else is new?

Gullett looked for all the world Monday night like he'd never missed nine weeks of the season with a broken left thumb, but Manager Sparky Anderson continued his game of musical chairs among Reds pitchers anyway.

"I think I felt stronger as the game went on," said Gullett, who pitched five shutout innings and was credited with a 3-2 win that Reds relievers later barely preserved over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Anderson, who is known as baseball's Captain Hook, followed the impressive Gullett performance with a procession of four relievers beginning with Pedro Borbon in the sixth.

Borbon yielded a single and hit a batter after the Reds had built their lead to 3-0 in the top of the eighth.

Will McEnaney was greeted by Ron Fairly's run-scoring double when he spelled Borbon, then Clay Carroll and finally Rawly Eastwick subdued the Cards after they scored another run in the ninth.

"This keeps us all in shape," quipped the good-natured Carroll, the 32-year-old dean of the Cincinnati relief corps, following his abbreviated stint.

"There was an article in the paper that said our relievers are not overworked, and it's true," Carroll added. "We don't have any pressure on us. We're just playing loose."

Cincinnati's victory, its ninth in a row and 14th in 15 games, came on run-producing hits by Gullett in the second, Tony Perez in the fifth and Pete Rose in the eighth.

But before the Reds were able to blunt the Cardinal bid, the 24-year-old Eastwick endured peril in the ninth.

St. Louis runners were at every base with one out when Eastwick inherited a 2-0 count on Mike Tyson as the successor to Carroll.

Eastwick completed the walk to force in a run, then set down Fairly on a pop fly in front of the plate and induced Brock to fly out ending the game.

The Reds' victory, also their fifth in a row over the Cards, dropped St. Louis 2½ games behind the Philadelphia Phillies and idle Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League East.

Gullett strong

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Don Gullett knew he could go the distance. But he also knew Captain Hook had no such thoughts.

Captain Hook is Sparky Anderson, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, who has a habit of taking out starting pitchers as often as some people take out the garbage.

Not that the Reds' starters are anything resembling that, mind you. It's just that Anderson has been known to take out a starter with a 10-run lead in the ninth inning.

So Gullett was starting his first game in nine weeks Monday night. He had been kayoed out of the Reds' rotation by a hairline fracture of his left thumb, the result of a line drive off the bat of Atlanta's Larvell Blanks on June 16.

And Gullett knew he couldn't expect to stick around too long. In fact, he knew 24 hours in advance that he wouldn't go the distance. But he stuck around just long enough—five shutout innings—to raise his record to 10-3 in the Reds' 3-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

"We had planned to pitch him only five to seven innings," Anderson said. "I said yesterday he was 100 per cent. I also said I'd be more than surprised if the Cardinals were able to score a run off him."

Towns heads SWB

BOLIVAR — Howard Garrett, new head basketball coach at Southwest Baptist College today released a tentative basketball roster for the 1975-76 season. Garrett says that the 15 man roster represents considerable experience by virtue of those Bearcat players who will be returning and at least three transfers from Lake Land College in Mattoon, Ill., where he coached last year.

From the 1974-75 Bearcats, returning starters include 6-5 Fred Towns who received honorable mention all-American plaudits. Fred, from Sikeston, led the district in rebounding while he set new school records in that department. Another starter who will be back for more hardwood action is 6-6 George Ridens of Norwood, Mo. George started at center for most of the season, and was one of the few freshmen in District 16 who made the big step to varsity action in his first year.

Donniel Harrell of Kansas City and Brent Yates of Preston, Mo., are two guards who held starting assignments throughout most of the season and who will be back for another year. Both boys will be seniors this year at Southwest.

From his 33-5 squad at Lake Land last year, Garrett expects help from 6-3 guard Tom Taylor, 6-3 center Joe Schumacher and 6-4 forward Larry Jarrett.

The only player signed by the Bearcats prior to Garrett's arrival was 6-10 Peadro Spicer of Caruthersville. If he develops up to his promise, he could be the big man the 'Cats have been lacking for sevaral years.

The basketball season may be three months away from some, but in Bolivar and on the campus of Southwest Baptist College, the fans are already anticipating the 1975-76 Bearcat season.

Bulldogs work pleases coaches

Coach Terry Smith may not be a member of the local Optimist club, but the third year Bulldog head gridiron coach is expressing an optimistic view about the 1975 season.

"We're going to WIN!" Coach Smith stated. His optimistic views are most generated by his troops, who have stated they are going to "put SHS back on the football map."

The Bulldogs enjoyed only their second day outside Monday since the workouts began Friday, after rain forced the drills into the SHS fieldhouse.

"We got in a little hitting," coach Smith sighed. "Everybody's working hard and looking good!"

Injuries have already begun to crop up in the Bulldog camp with the most notable to first year man James Wilder, who has dislocated both thumbs and Mark Heeb, who has been bothered by a knee injury.

Coach Smith noted that Monday was the cutoff date for athletes to report. The number in camp rose to 70 with the appearance of six new athletes.

The Bulldogs will go the air more this season than in the past with the passing of Ron Priday and the target of big 6-foot-6 Paul Gilbow.

Assistant coach Al Holmes, Jim Graham, Murray Sullivan and Tom Horton have had praise for individuals in the early season workouts and have singled out linemen Wade Barber and Freddie Gilliland for their work.

The Bulldogs continued their two-a-day workouts at 9 a.m. today. The second drill is set for 6 p.m. A few others get in a third day of drills when they report at noon for special physical fitness drills in hopes of catching the others who ran the optical course on the first day of drills.

Briefs

ROSEBURG, Ore. (AP) — Woody Green and Rich Lewis of the National Football League stand trial in Douglas County Circuit Court Aug. 26 on charges of raping a 16-year-old girl.

Green, 23, was the Kansas City Chiefs' first draft choice this year.

Lewis, 24, is a linebacker with the New York Jets.

Authorities say the alleged attack took place last May 11 at Loon Lake, 36 miles northwest of Roseburg in western Douglas County.

---

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Spirits of St. Louis have acquired guard Barry Parkhill from the Virginia Squires in return for cash and future considerations, Spirits' president and general manager Harry Weltman announced.

The 6-foot-4 Parkhill was the Squires' first-round draft choice in the 1973 American Basketball Association draft after being voted the Atlantic Coast Conference's player of the year at Virginia.

But he saw only limited action with the Squires, averaging 4.7 points a game in 1973-74 and 7.7 points in 1974-75.

The Spirits also announced the waiving of former St. Louis University center Gene Moore and the release of guard Steve Jones to make a deal for himself.

Super league

NEW YORK (AP) — First it was the Super Bowl and the Super Dome. Now the colleges have a brainstorm: the Super Conference.

A mammoth conference of approximately 75 of the nation's major football powers has been formally proposed to the National Collegiate Athletic Association and could become a reality as early as next season.

The plan was presented to the policy-making NCAA Council last week at the special convention on economics in Chicago by the NCAA's Special Committee on Reorganization. The Council said the plan would be considered at its next meeting in October.

"I'd say the Council probably will officially sponsor the proposal at the annual NCAA convention next January," a source close to the NCAA told The Associated Press Monday. "It has very strong support on the Reorganization Committee."

"This super association was one of the things the larger schools proposed four years ago when the Reorganization Committee was formed," according to the NCAA. "It was shouted down at the time and we kind of compromised instead of dividing the majors into two groups."

The NCAA split into three divisions two years ago, but talk of a super conference surfaced again in Chicago last week when the special convention passed new recruiting and personnel regulations that put all 134 of the current Division I schools on equal footing.

A preliminary plan calls for what basically would be a football conference composed of 75 schools — seven conferences plus 15 independents. The conferences are The Big Eight, Southeastern, The Big Ten, Pacific-8, Southwest, Atlantic coast and Western Athletic. The independents are Notre Dame, Penn State, Pitt, Georgia Tech, Miami of Florida, Florida State, South Carolina, Tulane, Boston College, Syracuse, West Virginia, Air Force, Utah State, Memphis State and Virginia Tech.

The next division would consist of nine conferences — Big Sky, Ivy League, Mid-American, Missouri Valley, Ohio Valley, Pacific Coast Athletic Association, Southern, Southland and Southwestern Athletic — plus the following independents:

Akron, Army, Cincinnati, Colgate, Connecticut, Dayton, Delaware, Florida A&M, Hawaii, Holy Cross, Illinois State, Indiana State, Louisville, Massachusetts, Marshall, Navy, Nevada-Las Vegas, North Texas State, Northeast Louisiana, Rutgers, Southern Mississippi, Temple, Tennessee-Chattanooga, Tennessee State, Villanova and Western Carolina.

The rest of the nation's football-playing NCAA colleges would be remain Division II or III. The super conference would be called Division I, with the other majors Division I-A.

Possible criteria for membership in the super conference are the number of football scholarships, future scheduling patterns, past performances against other teams in the new division, number of varsity sports and athletic facilities.

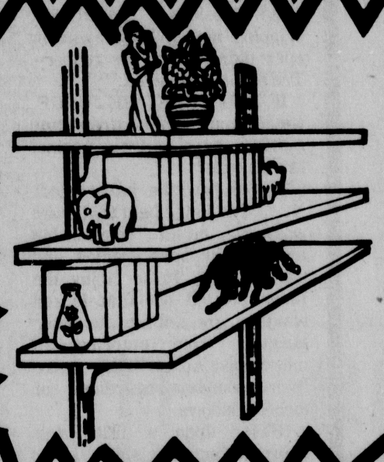

To remain a member, a school would be required to play 51 per cent of its nonconference games against other teams in the division while independents would have to play 51 per cent of all games against other "super powers."

CHICAGO (AP) — The publicity director for the Chicago Cubs, Charles A. "Chuck" Shriver, has been named assistant general manager and director of communications of the San Diego Sails of the American Basketball Association, it has been announced.

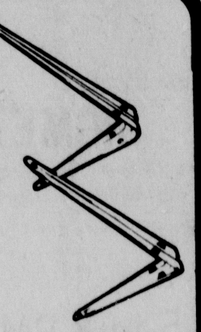

Shriver, 36, has been manager of information and services for the Cubs for the past eight years.

Bulldogs work pleases coaches

Coach Terry Smith may not be a member of the local Optimist club, but the third year Bulldog head gridiron coach is expressing an optimistic view about the 1975 season.

"We're going to WIN!" Coach Smith stated. His optimistic views are most generated by his troops, who have stated they are going to "put SHS back on the football map."

The Bulldogs enjoyed only their second day outside Monday since the workouts began Friday, after rain forced the drills into the SHS fieldhouse.

"We got in a little hitting," coach Smith sighed. "Everybody's working hard and looking good!"

Injuries have already begun to crop up in the Bulldog camp with the most notable to first year man James Wilder, who has dislocated both thumbs and Mark Heeb, who has been bothered by a knee injury.

Coach Smith noted that Monday was the cutoff date for athletes to report. The number in camp rose to 70 with the appearance of six new athletes.

The Bulldogs will go the air more this season than in the past with the passing of Ron Priday and the target of big 6-foot-6 Paul Gilbow.

Assistant coach Al Holmes, Jim Graham, Murray Sullivan and Tom Horton have had praise for individuals in the early season workouts and have singled out linemen Wade Barber and Freddie Gilliland for their work.

The Bulldogs continued their two-a-day workouts at 9 a.m. today. The second drill is set for 6 p.m. A few others get in a third day of drills when they report at noon for special physical fitness drills in hopes of catching the others who ran the optical course on the first day of drills.

Briefs

ROSEBURG, Ore. (AP) — Woody Green and Rich Lewis of the National Football League stand trial in Douglas County Circuit Court Aug. 26 on charges of raping a 16-year-old girl.

Green, 23, was the Kansas City Chiefs' first draft choice this year.

Lewis, 24, is a linebacker with the New York Jets.

Authorities say the alleged attack took place last May 11 at Loon Lake, 36 miles northwest of Roseburg in western Douglas County.

---

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Spirits of St. Louis have acquired guard Barry Parkhill from the Virginia Squires in return for cash and future considerations, Spirits' president and general manager Harry Weltman announced.

The 6-foot-4 Parkhill was the Squires' first-round draft choice in the 1973 American Basketball Association draft after being voted the Atlantic Coast Conference's player of the year at Virginia.

But he saw only limited action with the Squires, averaging 4.7 points a game in 1973-74 and 7.7 points in 1974-75.

The Spirits also announced the waiving of former St. Louis University center Gene Moore and the release of guard Steve Jones to make a deal for himself.

Super league

NEW YORK (AP) — First it was the Super Bowl and the Super Dome. Now the colleges have a brainstorm: the Super Conference.

A mammoth conference of approximately 75 of the nation's major football powers has been formally proposed to the National Collegiate Athletic Association and could become a reality as early as next season.

The plan was presented to the policy-making NCAA Council last week at the special convention on economics in Chicago by the NCAA's Special Committee on Reorganization. The Council said the plan would be considered at its next meeting in October.

"I'd say the Council probably will officially sponsor the proposal at the annual NCAA convention next January," a source close to the NCAA told The Associated Press Monday. "It has very strong support on the Reorganization Committee."

"This super association was one of the things the larger schools proposed four years ago when the Reorganization Committee was formed," according to the NCAA. "It was shouted down at the time and we kind of compromised instead of dividing the majors into two groups."

The NCAA split into three divisions two years ago, but talk of a super conference surfaced again in Chicago last week when the special convention passed new recruiting and personnel regulations that put all 134 of the current Division I schools on equal footing.

A preliminary plan calls for what basically would be a football conference composed of 75 schools — seven conferences plus 15 independents. The conferences are The Big Eight, Southeastern, The Big Ten, Pacific-8, Southwest, Atlantic jcoast and Western Athletic. The independents are Notre Dame, Penn State, Pitt, Georgia Tech, Miami of Florida, Florida State, South Carolina, Tulane, Boston College, Syracuse, West Virginia, Air Force, Utah State, Memphis State and Virginia Tech.

The next division would consist of nine conferences — Big Sky, Ivy League, Mid-American, Missouri Valley, Ohio Valley, Pacific Coast Athletic Association, Southern, Southland and Southwestern Athletic — plus the following independents:

Akron, Army, Cincinnati, Colgate, Connecticut, Dayton, Delaware, Florida A&M, Hawaii, Holy Cross, Illinois State, Indiana State, Louisville, Massachusetts, Marshall, Navy, Nevada-Las Vegas, North Texas State, Northeast Louisiana, Rutgers, Southern Mississippi, Temple, Tennessee-Chattanooga, Tennessee State, Villanova and Western Carolina.

The rest of the nation's football-playing NCAA colleges would be remain Division II or III. The super conference would be called Division I, with the other majors Division I-A.

Possible criteria for membership in the super conference are the number of football scholarships, future scheduling patterns, past performances against other teams in the new division, number of varsity sports and athletic facilities.

To remain a member, a school would be required to play 51 per cent of its nonconference games against other teams in the division while independents would have to play 51 per cent of all games against other "super powers."

CHICAGO (AP) — The publicity director for the Chicago Cubs, Charles A. "Chuck" Shriver, has been named assistant general manager and director of communications of the San Diego Sails of the American Basketball Association, it has been announced.

Shriver, 36, has been manager of information and services for the Cubs for the past eight years.

The case of the really dressless girl

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Irma bought her clothes on time, but she never paid for them on time. The result? Her creditors were constantly on her trail. One creditor, however, Mr. Wipple, finally decided he had all he could take from Irma and decided to take what he could.

Finding Irma not at home, he jimmied open a ground-floor window and reappropriated all the unpaid-for items that he had sold her. Upon leaving, he left the window open and later that day two burglars happened by and, taking advantage of the situation, removed every dress Irma owned.

Dresstitute, Irma sued Mr. Wipple for her lost attire.

"I was robbed," complained Irma in court, "because birdbrain Wipple left my window open."

"Had Irma paid her bills," was Mr. Wipple's defense, "I wouldn't have had to jimmy open her window. Consequently, if anyone was at fault, it was Irma. Besides," added Mr. Wipple, "my leaving the window open didn't cause the robbery. The robbers caused it."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit dresstitute Irma to have redress against Mr. Wimple?

This is how the judge-ruled: NO! The judge held that there was no direct relationship between the open window and the burglary. In so ruling the judge pointed out that locked windows are not apt to deter burglars from entering an unoccupied home. They make their rounds regardless of locked windows.

(Based upon a 1930 Utah Supreme Court Decision)

Dr. Lamb

Two girls are 'veggies'

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My girls became vegetarians a year ago. They were 13 and 11 years old. Both are very active, make average grades in school and haven't slowed down at all. I must confess that although I am worried about their being veggies, as they call it, I can't find a single argument against their being veggies. They are both in good health and love vegetables, fruits, cheeses of all kinds, eggs, and I keep plenty in the house.

They feel strongly about this. A major factor in their decision not to eat meat is TV. The shows that make pet cows, pigs, chickens and other animals almost human and their love of animals makes them deplore the slaughter of animals. They think if they don't eat meat they are not contributing to the slaughter of animals.

I'm not sure why I'm so worried or why I wish they would go back to being meat-eaters. I would like your unbiased professional opinion.

DEAR READER — It is hard to give up beliefs one was raised with. For years we have been told that eating meat was essential to good health. Meat is excellent food, but you can certainly live a healthy life without it. To do so, however, you must get an adequate amount of the right protein in your diet. Failure to have all the essential amino acids in sufficient quantity can lead to stunted growth and poor development. The growth phase demands more protein than some other years.

For more information on protein write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019, send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents and ask for The Health Letter number 3-5 on Protein Part I.

Particularly for the growing years I like to see vegetarians include plenty of milk or its equivalent in the diet. To avoid too much saturated fat this can be fortified skim milk, or even the non-fat, dry milk powder used in cooking.

A vegetarian can use more eggs than those who are heavy meat eaters, because the vegetarian diet otherwise is usually low in cholesterol. Plants and their products contain no cholesterol. Even so, I am not encouraging a large consumption of egg yolks (the whites are fine), because many young people have high cholesterol levels according to recent surveys.

Most cheese, except the cottage or farmer cheese is very high in fat (about 80 per cent of its calories are fat), and about half of the fat is saturated fat. I do think that low fat cottage cheese is excellent for both protein and calcium. The milk, cottage cheese and mature beans, if used in sufficient quantity, will provide adequate protein.

Vegetarians tend, as a group, to live longer than others in our modern society. Heart attacks and strokes may occur an average of 10 years later. Most vegetarians are health-conscious and weigh less, don't tend to smoke or have other bad habits. All of this helps in staying younger longer in good health. A recent study from Harvard Medical School showed that groups eating mostly a vegetarian diet tended to have significantly lower blood pressure.

Dr. Lamb

Two girls are 'veggies'

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My girls became vegetarians a year ago. They were 13 and 11 years old. Both are very active, make average grades in school and haven't slowed down at all. I must confess that although I am worried about their being veggies, as they call it, I can't find a single argument against their being veggies. They are both in good health and love vegetables, fruits, cheeses of all kinds, eggs, and I keep plenty in the house.

They feel strongly about this. A major factor in their decision not to eat meat is TV. The shows that make pet cows, pigs, chickens and other animals almost human and their love of animals makes them deplore the slaughter of animals. They think if they don't eat meat they are not contributing to the slaughter of animals.

I'm not sure why I'm so worried or why I wish they would go back to being meat-eaters. I would like your unbiased professional opinion.

DEAR READER — It is hard to give up beliefs one was raised with. For years we have been told that eating meat was essential to good health. Meat is excellent food, but you can certainly live a healthy life without it. To do so, however, you must get an adequate amount of the right protein in your diet. Failure to have all the essential amino acids in sufficient quantity can lead to stunted growth and poor development. The growth phase demands more protein than some other years.

For more information on protein write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019, send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents and ask for The Health Letter number 3-5 on Protein Part I.

Particularly for the growing years I like to see vegetarians include plenty of milk or its equivalent in the diet. To avoid too much saturated fat this can be fortified skim milk, or even the non-fat, dry milk powder used in cooking.

A vegetarian can use more eggs than those who are heavy meat eaters, because the vegetarian diet otherwise is usually low in cholesterol. Plants and their products contain no cholesterol. Even so, I am not encouraging a large consumption of egg yolks (the whites are fine), because many young people have high cholesterol levels according to recent surveys.

Most cheese, except the cottage or farmer cheese is very high in fat (about 80 per cent of its calories are fat), and about half of the fat is saturated fat. I do think that low fat cottage cheese is excellent for both protein and calcium. The milk, cottage cheese and mature beans, if used in sufficient quantity, will provide adequate protein.

Vegetarians tend, as a group, to live longer than others in our modern society. Heart attacks and strokes may occur an average of 10 years later. Most vegetarians are health-conscious and weigh less, don't tend to smoke or have other bad habits. All of this helps in staying younger longer in good health. A recent study from Harvard Medical School showed that groups eating mostly a vegetarian diet tended to have significantly lower blood pressure.

Council approves payments

NEW MADRID — The City Council Monday night approved construction payments, discussed solid waste disposal and approved appointments.

The final construction payment of $477,934.34 for the city's 600-megawatt electrical generating station in St. Judge Industrial Park was approved.

The renewal of a contract for garbage and solid waste disposal was discussed. The council agreed to advertise for bids for a new contract and set a deadline of Sept. 5 for submission of bids.

The present contract, which expires in September, costs each residential user a fee of $2.25 per month for curbside pickups. The fee is billed by the city on the bill with fees for electric, water and sewer service. Business and commercial waste pickups are negotiated on an individual basis by the contractor.

Mrs. Dorothy Edwards was appointed as a seventh member of the park board and the appointment of Donald Peak as city dog catcher was also approved.

The board was advised by Mayor Jim Cravens that a rough draft for a new ordinance for city merchant licenses was being prepared for review by the council members prior to next month's meeting.

The council was advised of a meeting to be held with representatives from the Department of Housing and Urban Development at 3 p.m. Wednesday at Malden for discussion of the city's request for $290,000 in federal grants for construction of street, sewer and drainage facilities.

The next regular meeting of the council was rescheduled for Sept. 2 because the first Monday falls on a holiday, Labor Day.

County Court authorizes BRPC study

BENTON — Ron Yersak, planning director of the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission in Malden, asked the Scott County Court Monday to let the commission do a study and develop a plan on land use in the county. The commission would prepare maps, plan subdivisions and zoning regulations.

The court signed a contract with the commission at a cost of $13,000, with no money to be paid until January of 1976.

Yersak said the study will be started in September.

The County Court will appoint a planning commission to make restrictions and use any or all of the report made by the Bootheel Commission.

Members of the Lambert City Council petitioned the court to close some streets and alley's in that city.

The Court approved the closing of all streets and alleys except Cleo Street and the alley that forms the junction with Cleo Street.

Paul H. Stricker of Charleston Route Two was appointed to Levee District Number Two board of commissioners.

No. 1

purchases will "give the Russians an open door to our private grain market ... in a way that is going to cost the American consumer billions of dollars."

"The American housewife is still paying" for the 1972 grain deal which resulted in higher domestic prices, Meany said, asserting that "this is not going to happen again."

Meany suggested that any new grain purchases should be made on a government-to-government basis instead of permitting private industry to negotiate the sales.

The grain boycott affects ports on the East and Gulf coasts and the Great Lakes, where the longshoremen's union represents dock workers. West coast dock workers are represented by an independent union which has not joined the protest.

Assessments are reduced for two firms

BENTON — Two industrial firms were granted a reduction in property assessments Monday by the Scott County Board of Appeals, and an assessment request in behalf of property leased to a third industrial firm was taken under advisement.

Division manager Leonard Waldron and comptroller John Voix appeared before the board in behalf of Wetterau Foods Inc. facility at Scott City to protest a property assessment increase.

The firm's assessment of $140,000 last year had been increased to $840,000, following the State Equalization Board guidelines calling for an increase in the assessment rates.

A new valuation figure of $700,000 was approved by the board.

Two representatives for Malone & Hyde, Inc., at Sikeston asked for a reduction in the firm's 1975 assessment of $666,000.

The board approved a reduction to $350,000.

Allen Blanton, Galen Kruger and Jim Beaird, representing Sikeston Industrial Development Corp., came before the board asking that property leased to Caproco, Inc., in Sikeston be assessed the same as it was in 1971.

The Board of Appeals took the request under advisement.

Richard Pettit of Scott City requested a reduction in his property valuation from $7,700. The board approved a reduction to $5,500.

The session was the fourth the board has held on current assessments. In the three preceding sessions, the board had reduced assessments in the county by a total of $98,600.

Council delays issues

DEXTER — In a lengthy City Council meeting Monday night, regulations for trash disposal for businesses were liberalized, police officers were appointed and bids were accepted to clean out a ditch. Decisions on separate proposals concerning a community building and nightclub were postponed.

The community building decision came after Mayor Willis Conner told the council that a similar building in Malden has caused a division among the citizens and the cost of construction has already overrun the federal grant.

Conner and Alderman Leslie Bay early this month checked both the Malden and Parma community buildings.

Conner seemed more impressed with the Parma building, saying it was more functional and more needed than the one at Malden.

Conner did not come out squarely for or against the city sponsoring such a building, saying only, "If it is a good thing for us, I am for it; if it isn't, I'm not."

Bay, however, flatly opposed the city taking on such a project.

"I have no hard feelings about it," he said, "but I don't believe in it. My thinking is that in the long run the city doesn't need what is being proposed."

Bay asked, "If we have an overrun, will the federal government pick up the tab? The building would be more of a luxury to the people of this town than a necessity."

Alderman Jack Smarr, however, advised the council not to entirely reject the plan. "We should keep working on it," he said. "It's something the county can use and will be an asset to the city. It's too good a program to give up."

"It ma may be good for the county," Conner remarked "but it looks as if the citizens of Dexter will have to pay the freight."

The council voted unanimously to table the matter until more information is gathered.

"This is the third time we have been told to come up with more information," Gary Smith, an attorney working for the building, said later. "Frankly, we're pretty discouraged."

He said supporters of the community building project are also "a little dissatisfied with the mayor and Bay for going to Malden without letting us know and giving us the opportunity to talk to the same people they did."

Smith said pre-applications must be filed by October and added that only a few of them will be approved to apply for federal funds for the project.

He said if the city is late filing the proper forms, the project obviously will not have as good a chance for approval.

Smith, representing D. I. Webb, also asked the council to permit Webb to open a lounge at 14 and 16 E. South Main St., which would provide dancing, food and beer and live music.

Webb, who owns the Paper Doll Lounge town, told the council, "If it get's out of hand, we'll close it. I'm not asking for a rowdy or a bawdy place, but some people like a beer once in awhile, or to dance. It's not going to be a honky tonk."

The council was divided in its discussion of the matter, with Bay and Alderman James Williams opposing the request.

Alderman Bill Nelson, however, commented, "People are going to drink, and they go to Sikeston or Poplar Bluff and are then on the highway." He said he had no objection to Webb's proposal.

On the vote to table the matter, the council deadlocked 3-3. Conner cast the tie - breaking vote in favor of tabling the matter.

Webb then complained to the council that the two places in town allowed to sell liquor by the drink receive preferential treatment.

He said the city requires beer taverns to close at midnight Saturday, but the two lounges are allowed to serve until 1:30 a.m.

The council told Webb that the two places allowed to sell liquor by the drink are restaurants that sell alcoholic beverages under state law, over which the city has no control, and that taverns are allowed to sell beer under a city ordinance that requires a midnight closing time on Saturday.

Smarr said that if it were not for the state law, he would vote against any serving of liquor on Sunday.

Smith and City Attorney Paul McGhee found only two city ordinances pertaining to dancing. One forbids dancing within the city limits on Sunday and the other requires a $5 per night fee.

The recently initiated solid waste collection and disposal service was again discussed, and the council decided to liberalize the rules governing the service by allowing businesses to be serviced by a company of their own choosing, if they wish.

Private homes will still be serviced by Woods Sanitation Co. under a city contract.

Appointed to the police force were Bill Wagner as a reserve police dispatcher, B. V. Ledbetter as a regular dispatcher and G. H. Turner as a night officer.

Turner formerly lived in Corning Ark., but now lives in Dexter, as do the other men appointed Monday night.

The council accepted a bid of $912 submitted by Keener Gravel Co. to clean out a ditch from One Mile Road to Harris Drive. The only other bid was $950 by H & H Gravel Co.

Conner toldthe council that the Missouri Public Service Commission has ordered a flashing signal light and gate to be installed at a railroad crossing on One Mile Road.

The federal government will pay 90 per cent of the cost, the railroad five per cent and the city five per cent, with the city's share not to exceed $2,000.

The council also went on record as opposing a proposed rate increase for Missouri Utilities Co. and declared the results of a bond issue election on Aug. 5 official.

Voters approved a $1.2 million bond issue for the expansion of Monarch Feed Mills by a vote of 234-44.

Hike for jobless fund is expected in 1976

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — An across-the-board hike in employer contributions to the dwindling unemployment compensation trust fund will probably be recommended to the Missouri Legislature next January.

A group of labor and business officials tentatively agreed to back that proposal Monday as well as one clarifying state law to allow federal loans in case the fund runs dry.

The recommendations, which will be presented when the legislature convenes in its regular session for immediate action, are aimed at heading off temporary depletion of the fund in March as well as possible insolvency by the end of 1976.

Coupled with a moritorium on any other legislation changing the unemployment compensation law during the regular session, the short-range changes are also intended to give the business-labor panel time to work out a comprehensive revision of the entire financing system so the fund's future soundness will be guaranteed.

The panel has been looking at the funding problems for the state's jobless benefit programs since the end of the last legislative session when increased payments were enacted but no substantial boost in contributions to pay for them was authorized.

The combination of high unemployment and increased benefits as well as declining taxable payrolls due to layoffs has boosted payments from the fund well above the contributions made to support it.

Although the exact amount of the contribution increase has not been determined, officials of the state's Employment Security Division said it would probably have to be at least 1.5 or 2 per cent. It would probably be in effect for 12 months.

That amount would be added to boosts already written into the law that will increase payments by business from 28 per cent to more than 400 per cent next year.

The specific details of the legislative recommendations will be worked out Sept. 8 when the members of the committee, set up by State Labor and Industrial Relations Chief Geoffrey McCarron, meet in Kansas City after discussing the proposal with the organizations they represent.

Based on present estimates of the Employment Security Divison, the unemployment compensation trust fund, which stood at $240.3 million in January, will have only $80.8 million in it at year's end.

Without an across-the board increase, only about $156 million will be received from employers next year while estimated benefit costs will run about $245 million.

"There's going to be a lot of employers yelling about it," said John Fallon, who represents the Missouri Chamber of Commerce. "But it's a quicker, shorter dose of casteroil" to levy a surcharge than to attempt to make quick changes in the contribution rate structure or borrow large sums from the federal government.

With substantial support for the short-term legislative changes from both business and labor, members of the committee indicated the proposals would be easily adopted by the General Assembly.

2 thefts reported

DEXTER — Two burglaries were reported to police Monday.

A fish and tackle box worth $100 was taken Sunday night from a boat in the back yard of the Vernon Gard home, 102 W Taylor St.

A trailer owned by Louis H. Storms, 818 Dexter Creek Road, was broken into sometime between Thursday and Monday and a battery, radio and bow and arrows were taken.

The thief apparently entered a small window on the northeast side of trailer.

Events planned for office opening

NEW MADRID — A formal opening of the new Chamber of Commerce office, located in the city museum building at the south end of Main Street, and an open house for the public to view the newly renovated museum facilities will be held Sept. 20 and 21.

An added feature in conjunction with the event will be a two-day arts and crafts show planned as a Bicentennial project by the New Madrid Bicentennial Commission.

The show is open to any artist or craftsman in the Bootheel area who would like to place his or her work on exhibit. The only requirement for entering is that the exhibitors must provide their own display equipment.

Mrs. Don Lloyd, Mrs. William Catt and Mrs. Clint Halstead are chairmen for the show.

Exhibitors may contact Mrs. Halstead at the chamber office, telephone number 748-5300, for information.

Hours for the open house and exhibition will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sept. 20 and 1 to 5 p.m. Sept. 21.

"The event is aimed at creating citizen interest in both the historical museum, which we believe will be a great asset to the community, and also to promote participation in Bicentennial activities planned by the New Madrid Bicentennial Commission," Mrs. Halstead, executive secretary of the chamber, said.

"When the people see what has been accomplished, mostly through volunteer work and donations, we are confident they will want to join the effort in securing historical items to be placed in the museum," she added.

Testimony relating to Lasater case to be kept secret

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A federal judge has ordered pretrial testimony relating to an indictment against the former board chairman of Missouri's largest bank kept secret.

A hearing began in U. S. District Court Monday on motions by Donald Lasater, former board chairman and chief executive officer of the Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis, to dismiss a perjury indictment against him.

A federal grand jury investigating the personal finances of Warren E. Hearnes, former Missouri governor, charged Lasater last February with perjuring himself in testimony that month. The charge related to Lasater's testimony concerning the sale and purchase of municipal bonds by the bank to a political ally of Hearnes, the late J. V. Conran.

Lasater's counsel seeks dismissal of the indictment on grounds the grand jury overstepped the scope of its investigation in questioning the banker, who is on leave as the bank's board chairman.

Because of the motion by Lasater's counsel, it was expected the government would reveal more information about its investigation into the Hearnes' administration to demonstrate the relevance of Lasater's testimony.

However, the government made the motion, which Judge John W. Oliver accepted, that the information be kept secret at this time.

Attorneys for both sides were expected to deal with Lasater's motion Tuesday during a day-long conference.

Federal grant awarded to Dunklin County for improved drainage

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A $100,000 federal grant to be supported with local funds, has been awarded to Dunklin County in the Missouri Bootheel for improved drainage.

The project calls for clearance of brush, timber and debris in the Hornersville, Clarkton and Holcomb areas that will make some 20,000 acres suitable for cultivation.

Gov. Christopher S. Bond said work is scheduled to start in 30 days and should be completed in about nine months.

The project, Bond said, will provide 22 jobs in the county, where unemployment has run about 5 per cent above the already high state average.

"The most far-reaching effects will come from the additional 20,000 acres made suitable for cultivation," Bond said of the grant's impact.

"Job opportunities will be created for farming and related agricultural businesses also will be benefitted."

Council approves payments

NEW MADRID — The City Council Monday night approved construction payments, discussed solid waste disposal and approved appointments.

The final construction payment of $477,934.34 for the city's 600-megawatt electrical generating station in St. Judge Industrial Park was approved.

The renewal of a contract for garbage and solid waste disposal was discussed. The council agreed to advertise for bids for a new contract and set a deadline of Sept. 5 for submission of bids.

The present contract, which expires in September, costs each residential user a fee of $2.25 per month for curbside pickups. The fee is billed by the city on the bill with fees for electric water and sewer service. Business and commercial waste pickups are negotiated on an individual basis by the contractor.

Mrs. Dorothy Edwards was appointed as a seventh member of the park board and the appointment of Donald Peak as city dog catcher was also approved.

The board was advised by Mayor Jim Cravens that a rough draft for a new ordinance for city merchant licenses was being prepared for review by the council members prior to next month's meeting.

The council was advised of a meeting to be held with representatives from the Department of Housing and Urban Development at 3 p.m. Wednesday at Malden for discussion of the city's request for $290,000 in federal grants for construction of street, sewer and drainage facilities.

The next regular meeting of the council was rescheduled for Sept. 2 because the first Monday falls on a holiday, Labor Day.

County Court authorizes BRPC study

BENTON — Ron Yersak, planning director of the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission in Malden, asked the Scott County Court Monday to let the commission do a study and develop a plan on land use in the county. The commission would prepare maps, plan subdivisions and zoning regulations.

The court signed a contract with the commission at a cost of $13,000, with no money to be paid until January of 1976.

Yersak said the study will be started in September.

The County Court will appoint a planning commission to make restrictions and use any or all of the report made by the Bootheel Commission.

Members of the Lambert City Council petitioned the court to close some streets and alley's in that city.

The Court approved the closing of all streets and alleys except Cleo Street and the alley that forms the junction with Cleo Street.

Paul H. Stricker of Charleston Route Two was appointed to Levee District Number Two board of commissioners.

purchases will "give the Russians an open door to our private grain market ... in a way that is going to cost the American consumer billions of dollars."

"The American housewife is still paying" for the 1972 grain deal which resulted in higher domestic prices, Meany said, asserting that "this is not going to happen again."

Meany suggested that any new grain purchases should be made on a government-to-government basis instead of permitting private industry to negotiate the sales.

The grain boycott affects ports on the East and Gulf coasts and the Great Lakes, where the longshoremen's union represents dock workers. West coast dock workers are represented by an independent union which has not joined the protest.

Assessments are reduced for two firms

BENTON — Two industrial firms were granted a reduction in property assessments Monday by the Scott County Board of Appeals, and an assessment request in behalf of property leased to a third industrial firm was taken under advisement.

Division manager Leonard Waldron and comptroller John Voix appeared before the board in behalf of Wetterau Foods Inc. facility at Scott City to protest a property assessment increase.

The firm's assessment of $140,000 last year had been increased to $840,000, following the State Equalization Board guidelines calling for an increase in the assessment rates.

A new valuation figure of $700,000 was approved by the board.

Two representatives for Malone & Hyde, Inc., at Sikeston asked for a reduction in the firm's 1975 assessment of $666,000.

The board approved a reduction to $350,000.

Allen Blanton, Galen Kruger and Jim Beaird, representing Sikeston Industrial Development Corp., came before the board asking that property leased to Caproco, Inc., in Sikeston be assessed the same as it was in 1971.

The Board of Appeals took the request under advisement.

Richard Pettit of Scott City requested a reduction in his property valuation from $7,700. The board approved a reduction to $5,500.

The session was the fourth the board has held on current assessments. In the three preceding sessions, the board had reduced assessments in the county by a total of $98,600.

Council delays issues

DEXTER — In a lengthy City Council meeting Monday night, regulations for trash disposal for businesses were liberalized, police officers were appointed and bids were accepted to clean out a ditch. Decisions on separate proposals concerning a community building and nightclub were postponed.

The community building decision came after Mayor Willis Conner told the council that a similar building in Malden has caused a division among the citizens and the cost of construction has already overrun the federal grant.

Conner and Alderman Leslie Bay early this month checked both the Malden and Parma community buildings.

Conner seemed more impressed with the Parma building, saying it was more functional and more needed than the one at Malden.

Conner did not come out squarely for or against the city sponsoring such a building, saying only, "If it is a good thing for us, I am for it; if it isn't, I'm not."

Bay, however, flatly opposed the city taking on such a project.

"I have no hard feelings about it," he said, "but I don't believe in it. My thinking is that in the long run the city doesn't need what is being proposed."

Bay asked, "If we have an overrun, will the federal government pick up the tab? The building would be more of a luxury to the people of this town than a necessity."

Alderman Jack Smarr, however, advised the council not to entirely reject the plan. "We should keep working on it," he said. "It's something the county can use and will be an asset to the city. It's too good a program to give up."

"It ma may be good for the county," Conner remarked "but it looks as if the citizens of Dexter will have to pay the freight."

The council voted unanimously to table the matter until more information is gathered.

"This is the third time we have been told to come up with more information," Gary Smith, an attorney working for the building, said later. "Frankly, we're pretty discouraged."

He said supporters of the community building project are also "a little dissatisfied with the mayor and Bay for going to Malden without letting us know and giving us the opportunity to talk to the same people they did."

Smith said pre-applications must be filed by October and added that only a few of them will be approved to apply for federal funds for the project.

He said if the city is late filing the proper forms, the project obviously will not have as good a chance for approval.

Smith, representing D. I. Webb, also asked the council to permit Webb to open a lounge at 14 and 16 E. South Main St., which would provide dancing, food and beer and live music.

Webb, who owns the Paper Doll Lounge town, told the council, "If it get's out of hand, we'll close it. I'm not asking for a rowdy or a bawdy place, but some people like a beer once in awhile, or to dance. It's not going to be a honky tonk."

The council was divided in its discussion of the matter, with Bay and Alderman James Williams opposing the request.

Alderman Bill Nelson, however, commented, "People are going to drink, and they go to Sikeston or Poplar Bluff and are then on the highway." He said he had no objection to Webb's proposal.

On the vote to table the matter, the council deadlocked 3-3. Conner cast the tie - breaking vote in favor of tabling the matter.

Webb then complained to the council that the two places in town allowed to sell liquor by the drink receive preferential treatment.

He said the city requires beer taverns to close at midnight Saturday, but the two lounges are allowed to serve until 1:30 a.m.

The council told Webb that the two places allowed to sell liquor by the drink are restaurants that sell alcoholic beverages under state law, over which the city has no control, and that taverns are allowed to sell beer under a city ordinance that requires a midnight closing time on Saturday.

Smarr said that if it were not for the state law, he would vote against any serving of liquor on Sunday.

Smith and City Attorney Paul McGhee found only two city ordinances pertaining to dancing. One forbids dancing within the city limits on Sunday and the other requires a $5 per night fee.

The recently initiated solid waste collection and disposal service was again discussed, and the council decided to liberalize the rules governing the service by allowing businesses to be serviced by a company of their own choosing, if they wish.

Private homes will still be serviced by Woods Sanitation Co. under a city contract.

Appointed to the police force were Bill Wagner as a reserve police dispatcher, B. V. Ledbetter as a regular dispatcher and G. H. Turner as a night officer.

Turner formerly lived in Corning Ark., but now lives in Dexter, as do the other men appointed Monday night.

The council accepted a bid of $912 submitted by Keener Gravel Co. to clean out a ditch from One Mile Road to Harris Drive. The only other bid was $950 by H & H Gravel Co.

Conner toldthe council that the Missouri Public Service Commission has ordered a flashing signal light and gate to be installed at a railroad crossing on One Mile Road.

The federal government will pay 90 per cent of the cost, the railroad five per cent and the city five per cent, with the city's share not to exceed $2,000.

The council also went on record as opposing a proposed rate increase for Missouri Utilities Co. and declared the results of a bond issue election on Aug. 5 official.

Voters approved a $1.2 million bond issue for the expansion of Monarch Feed Mills by a vote of 234-44.

Hike for jobless fund is expected in 1976

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — An across-the-board hike in employer contributions to the dwindling unemployment compensation trust fund will probably be recommended to the Missouri Legislature next January.

A group of labor and business officials tentatively agreed to back that proposal Monday as well as one clarifying state law to allow federal loans in case the fund runs dry.

The recommendations, which will be presented when the legislature convenes in its regular session for immediate action, are aimed at heading off temporary depletion of the fund in March as well as possible insolvency by the end of 1976.

Coupled with a moritorium on any other legislation changing the unemployment compensation law during the regular session, the short-range changes are also intended to give the business-labor panel time to work out a comprehensive revision of the entire financing system so the fund's future soundness will be guaranteed.

The panel has been looking at the funding problems for the state's jobless benefit programs since the end of the last legislative session when increased payments were enacted but no substantial boost in contributions to pay for them was authorized.

The combination of high unemployment and increased benefits as well as declining taxable payrolls due to layoffs has boosted payments from the fund well above the contributions made to support it.

Although the exact amount of the contribution increase has not been determined, officials of the state's Employment Security Division said it would probably have to be at least 1.5 or 2 per cent. It would probably be in effect for 12 months.

That amount would be added to boosts already written into the law that will increase payments by business from 28 per cent to more than 400 per cent next year.

The specific details of the legislative recommendations will be worked out Sept. 8 when the members of the committee, set up by State Labor and Industrial Relations Chief Geoffrey McCarron, meet in Kansas City after discussing the proposal with the organizations they represent.

Based on present estimates of the Employment Security Divison, the unemployment compensation trust fund, which stood at $240.3 million in January, will have only $80.8 million in it at year's end.

Without an across-the board increase, only about $156 million will be received from employers next year while estimated benefit costs will run about $245 million.

"There's going to be a lot of employers yelling about it," said John Fallon, who represents the Missouri Chamber of Commerce. "But it's a quicker, shorter dose of casteroil" to levy a surcharge than to attempt to make quick changes in the contribution rate structure or borrow large sums from the federal government.

With substantial support for the short-term legislative changes from both business and labor, members of the committee indicated the proposals would be easily adopted by the General Assembly.

An added feature in conjunction with the event will be a two-day arts and crafts show planned as a Bicentennial project by the New Madrid Bicentennial Commission.

The show is open to any artist or craftsman in the Bootheel area who would like to place his or her work on exhibit. The only requirement for entering is that the exhibitors must provide their own display equipment.

"The event is aimed at creating citizen interest in both the historical museum, which we believe will be a great asset to the community, and also to promote participation in Bicentennial activities planned by the New Madrid Bicentennial Commission," Mrs. Halstead, executive secretary of the chamber, said.

"When the people see what has been accomplished, mostly through volunteer work and donations, we are confident they will want to join the effort in securing historical items to be placed in the museum," she added.

Testimony relating to Lasater case to be kept secret

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A federal judge has ordered pretrial testimony relating to an indictment against the former board chairman of Missouri's largest bank kept secret.

A hearing began in U. S. District Court Monday on motions by Donald Lasater, former board chairman and chief executive officer of the Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis, to dismiss a perjury indictment against him.

A federal grand jury investigating the personal finances of Warren E. Hearnes, former Missouri governor, charged Lasater last February with perjuring himself in testimony that month. The charge related to Lasater's testimony concerning the sale and purchase of municipal bonds by the bank to a political ally of Hearnes, the late J. V. Conran.

Lasater's counsel seeks dismissal of the indictment on grounds the grand jury overstepped the scope of its investigation in questioning the banker, who is on leave as the bank's board chairman.

Because of the motion by Lasater's counsel, it was expected the government would reveal more information about its investigation into the Hearnes' administration to demonstrate the relevance of Lasater's testimony.

However, the government made the motion, which Judge John W. Oliver accepted, that the information be kept secret at this time.

Attorneys for both sides were expected to deal with Lasater's motion Tuesday during a day-long conference.

Federal grant awarded to Dunklin County for improved drainage

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A $100,000 federal grant to be supported with local funds, has been awarded to Dunklin County in the Missouri Bootheel for improved drainage.

The project calls for clearance of brush, timber and debris in the Hornersville, Clarkton and Holcomb areas that will make some 20,000 acres suitable for cultivation.

Gov. Christopher S. Bond said work is scheduled to start in 30 days and should be completed in about nine months.

The project, Bond said, will provide 22 jobs in the county, where unemployment has run about 5 per cent above the already high state average.

"The most far-reaching effects will come from the additional 20,000 acres made suitable for cultivation," Bond said of the grant's impact.

"Job opportunities will be created for farming and related agricultural businesses also will be benefitted."

SOME OF OUR BEST SALESPERSON HAD PRIOR SALES EXPERIENCE
SOME HAD NEVER SOLD A THING

This isn't as strange as it seems. We are among the most successful companies in America because of our interest in the person and not a specific background.
An outstanding line of industrial products, a large and growing market, and our commitment to training has helped our salespeople to average from $17-$43,000 annually and earned commission.
They are backed by a drawing account up to $300 weekly and an excellent fringe benefit package.
If you have an outgoing personality, a receptive mind, and the ability to express yourself to people like yourself you may be able to realize your selling potential. Most essential is our desire to grow financially and personally in direct proportion to your own efforts.
Background in chemistry or chemical sales is not required.
If you fit the above, we would like to talk with you about you.

PADCO loses administrator

CAIRO, Ill. — PADCO Community Hospital is losing another administrator.

John A. Weishar, who began work at the trouble-ridden hospital in October 1974, submitted his resignation to the hospital board at a special meeting Thursday night. But there is some question whether his resignation which became effective Friday, was submitted voluntarily or requested by the board.

After the board meeting, when questioned about the resignation, chairman Richard D. Grigsby said "it was submitted voluntarily." However, some sources have indicated that Weishar was requested to submit his resignation Thursday night or be fired by the board.

Weishar refused to comment about his resignation, saying it ould be "in the best interests of the hospital not to say anything right now."

It has also been reported that the board has expressed continued dissatisfaction with Weishar since early this year. Some of the dissatisfaction centers around Weishar's desire to build a medical arts building, which the board does not consider feasible, and his discussions with state legislators about a loss shown on the hospital's financial records from 1974-75.

Sources have indicated that Weishar and Dr. Marvin Powers met with State Rep. Robert Winchester, R-Rosiclare and State Sen. Gene Johns, D-Marion, in June to discuss the $32,000 loss. The discussion was held without the knowledge of the board, sources said.

Dr. Powers confirmed that he and Weishar met with two state legislators and he said Weishar was concerned about a $53,000 shortage that was discovered this summer by hospital auditors. The auditors have said there are no vouchers to justify certain hospital expenses.

Grigsby has said the loss is the difference between what the hospital charged certain p atients and what Medicare is willing to pay. He said the loss is only $32,000 and will be reimbursed by Medicare by May 1976, but until that time the hospital must carry the loss on its records.

Before Weishar's resignation was announced by the board Thursday night, two executive sessions were held. When the meeting started, Grigsby said the board would be discussing personnel and requested that the board go into executive session.

During the 70-minute session, voices in the board room grew loud several times, and at one point the words "Winchester" and "Johns" could be heard in the hall. After the session ended, a reporter was called back into the board room.

Then board member Darrell L. Gustafson requested another executive session. This second closed-door meeting lasted about 10 minutes, after which Grigsby announced that Weishar had submitted his resignation.

The resignation stated that "due to the many problems confronting the hospital," Weishar felt that it would be in the best interest of all that he offer his regisnation, effective Aug. 15. Weishar said he "expressed his best wishes to the hospital" and he hoped for its continued success. Weishar will be given three week's pay after leaving, one week vacation pay and two weeks severance pay.

Grigsby said an interim committee, consisting of himself, Gustafson and John Tallman, will operate and administer the hospital until a new administrator can be found. The board will conduct a search for a new administrator, Grigsby said.

The following board members voted to accept the resignation; Grigsby, Gustafson, Tallman, Curtis Bingham, Maudie Bell Hill, Dr. A. L. Robinson and Richard Dickerson. Board members Cleveland Forbes and Jack Bauer were not present.

Grigsby said the board discussed "many problems in the hospital," during the two executive sessions, but he would not elaborate on specific problems.

The termination of Weishar as hospital administrator marks the fourth administrator to leave the hospital in two years. Robert Meyer was the first administrator to work at the hospital after the Pulaski-Alexander Development Corp. purchased the facility in 1973. Meyer was followed by James Pede in January 1974, who was followed by Harvey Pettry later that year.

Pettry served as interim administrator until October, when the board hired Weishar, who had been coordinator of hospitals for the Catholic Diocese of Peoria for more than 20 years before he came to PADCO.

When asked about his future plans, Weishar said, "I just don't know."

The survey said this showed Ford's trip to Helsinki and Eastern Europe had not increased his standing with the public and that the trip left the impression that he had neglected the economy while he was away.

Ford had an over-all 67-20 positive rating shortly after he took office. His Harris ratings haye been negative since then except for May when he got a 50-49 positive rating after the Mayaguez incident.

Mr. Charles Blanton, Jr.
Daily Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Missouri 63801

Dear Mr. Blanton:

On behalf of everyone who worked on the Mike Adams Leukemia Fund drive, I would like to express thanks to the fine people of Sikeston and surrounding area who donated time and money to the fund.

The fund was started by the Big Wheel CB'ers of Southeast Missouri, and has netted well over $5,000.00 to date.

Mike is the 11-year-old son of State Highway Patrol Sgt. and Mrs. Bill J. Adams of Poplar Bluff. He has been receiving treatment for leukemia at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis for almost two years. His condition at the present time is stable, and he is able to be home quite a bit. Mike is looking forward to starting back to school this fall.

For those persons interested in how the Cancer Crusade money is being used in research, Mrs. Bill Adams reported the following information: Mike is only the third child in the United States to be used in the newest Leukemia Research program available. This program wa: written by Dr. John Rivera from Chili, S.A. for second remission cases. It was started in May of 1975, and St. Jude is the only hospital where this project is being conducted. Since entering the new medical program, Mike is much improved and the family prays that his health will continue.

The public should be assured that their dimes and dollars donated to the Cancer Crusade are being put to good use through research and medical equipment, and the lives of many children and young people are being prolonged or saved through these programs.

Another aspect of cancer and leukemia research is the contribution made by these children who take part in the experimental research projects. These experiences are frequently quite painful and unpleasant, and there are no guarantees. But for the sake of future progress, this type of research is very necessary.

Mrs. Adams also mentioned that St. Jude was recently able to purchase a new microscope, which will possibly detect leukemia cells in the human body, and may eventually lead to the cure or better control of leukemia victims. The purchase of this $250,000 microscope was made possible by the Sammy Davis, Jr. Benefit Show held earlier this year in Miami, Florida.

It is our prayer that everyone who donated to the Cancer Crusade and the Mike Adams Leukemia Fund Drive will be rewarded in kind, and that they will be blessed for helping this family. Prayers are also solicited for Mike and Sgt. and Mrs. Adams.

Sincerely,
Betty J. Mathis
